Senate Group Votes 10-Pct. ECA Slash, $50 Million to Spain

Export Bank Loans Modify Original 12-Pct. Cut, Leave Total of $3.7 Billion

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday approved in effect a 10 per cent slash in Marshall Plan funds and earmarked 50 million dollars out of what was left for an ECA loan to Spain.

The committee first trimmed ECA appropriations to $3,628,380,000 for 12 months, a cut of more than 12 per cent under budget figures and $37,468,250 below the monthly rate voted by the House.

A subsequent amendment, however, authorized ECA to furnish Western European countries up to 150 million dollars in long-term Export-Import Bank loans, for which no appropriations are needed.

$3.7 Billions for 1950

In the words of Senate Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), this "eased the impact" of the cut, and left ECA with $3,778,380,000 available for the 1950 fiscal year.

The net cutback thus amounted to 10 per cent of the $4,198,200,000 the President said was needed. On a yearly basis it was some 300 million dollars less than the House provided for 10½ months.

The surprise 50-million-dollar loan provision cutting Spain in on ECA aid for the first time was approved by an 8-to-6 vote on motion of Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.).

Whether credit is actually extended to Franco's government would be left to the discretion of the administrator. The amendment provided that it be used for that purpose or not spent at all.

Opposed by State Dept.

The State Department has always opposed inclusion of Spain in the ECA program. McCarran told newsmen "there is no reason, in God's green earth, why it shouldn't be."

If the amendment finally clears Congress, and is approved by the administrator, McCarran said it would provide "a foot in the door" for Spain to participate along with other European countries.

Freely using the knife on all foreign aid spending, the Senate committee, just launching a session's-end economy drive, voted these other reductions:

Government relief in occupied areas of Germany, Austria, Japan and the Ryukyu Islands, cut 100 million dollars. The committee voted 900 million dollars, compared with one billion asked by the President and 925 million dollars approved by the House.

Military aid to Greece and Turkey, trimmed five million dollars. The President asked 50 million dollars and the House ap-

Chiang, Quirino Want 'Union'

U. S. Cautiously Sympathetic To Anti-Red Line-up in Pacific

By The Associated Press

The United States for the first time showed willingness yesterday to accept the idea of a line-up of Pacific nations against the spread of communism.

The State Department said cautiously it is "sympathetic" with efforts of Pacific peoples to develop close cooperation and mutual assistance on their vital problems.

This followed a joint proposal by China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines for a union of Asiatic and Pacific nations to contain and contract the threat of communism.

Previously Secretary of State Acheson along with Prime Minister Nehru of India had rejected as premature the idea of a Pacific defense treaty along the lines of the North Atlantic Pact. Their frown two months ago failed to deter Chiang and Quirino, who issued a joint appeal for a solid anti-Communist front following a weekend conference at Baguio in the Philippines.

Taft Opposes Atlantic Pact in Present Form

Calls for Reservation Denying Arms Tie-In; Fears 3d World War

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who has come a long way from his prewar isolationism, told the Senate yesterday he cannot vote for the North Atlantic Security Pact.

He said it obligates the United States to supply arms to Europe, that this in turn may lead to an arms race with Russia, and that World War III may well follow.

"I would like to be able to vote for a policy that will commit us to war if Russia attacks western Europe," he told the Senate.

"I would be glad to join in an agreement to occupy Germany indefinitely to guard against a third attack from that quarter . . .

"But I cannot vote for a treaty which, in my opinion, will do far more to bring about a third world war than it will ever to maintain the peace of the world."

Taft's argument that the pact carries a "moral obligation" to arm Europe came in the face of State Department insistence that the treaty and the arms program are "separate."

"The (arms) program would be necessary even if there were no North Atlantic treaty just as the treaty would be necessary even if the military assistance program had not yet been formulated," the department wrote Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.).

Vandenberg, once again at odds with Taft on an international issue, interrupted a speech for the treaty by Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) to read the statement.

The State Department went on to say that the $1,400,000,000 military-assistance program the Administration will shortly submit is not a program for "implementation" of the treaty.

"The MAP, both in inception and conception, has its own validity and necessity, rooted in basic elements of our foreign policy," it said. "It is true that some of these elements of our foreign policy are common to those which underlie the North Atlantic treaty . . .

"However, the military-assistance program covers countries which are not members of the North Atlantic treaty and includes certain countries for which military-assistance programs have been in effect for some time. It is separate from the treaty, except that the treaty and the MAP both serve the national interest and security of the United States and in this way supplement each other."

The statement didn't budge Taft. He told the Senate he is so convinced the treaty and the arms program are "inextricably involved" that he will support the pact only if the Senate adopts a

Call for Probe Of Hiss Judge Held Politics

Wood Will Fight Any Such Inquiry By House Committee

By the United Press

Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.), of the House Un-American Activities Committee, yesterday denounced as "political" demands for an investigation of Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman of New York, and said he would fight any such inquiry by his committee.

The demands were made by Representatives Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), and Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.), both members of Wood's committee. Both charged that Judge Kaufman was partial to the defense in his conduct of the perjury trial of Alger Hiss.

Wood said the request for an investigation was "just a political move." He said his committee has no right to decide whether a judge has been partial or impartial.

"Anyway, it's none of our business," he told reporters. "That's a matter for the House Judiciary Committee," where impeachment proceedings originate.

Wood said he will oppose any move to seek an investigation when the committee meets today. "Our committee is concerned with Un-American activities only," he added.

Kaufman was both defended and attacked on the House floor yesterday, and Nixon and Velde came in for a tongue-lashing by Representative Wayne L. Hays, (D., Ohio).

Amid applause, Hays demanded: "Is it the function of the Un-American Activities Committee to investigate subversive activities, or to make headlines at any price?"

He said Nixon had made "unwarranted, vicious partisan political accusations against the Administration" in connection with the Hiss case, and asked:

"Has any member of the Un-

Bees Buzz Bull, Bull Fouls Up Bridal Buffet

Rome, July 11 (AP).—You've heard of the bull in the china shop. This is about the bull in the dining room.

There was a marriage at a farm near Naples the other day, and the guests were gathered at the festive table. Outdoors, 5-year-old Francesco Minniti, all dolled up in a red suit for the occasion, played in a field. A bull spotted him.

Francesco fled into a nearby automobile. The bull charged, missed, and hit a beehive, the bees got mad and chased the bull. The bull ran into the house, and into the dining room. The guests jumped out the windows and into a water-filled ditch. The bull followed. The cool water calmed him down. Nobody was hurt.

King Decrees Dock Strike Emergency

2000 Military Sent Down to Wharves; Attlee May Draft Strikebreakers

London, July 11 (AP).—Britain's Labor government cracked down on striking London dockers today by proclaiming a state of national emergency.

The cabinet moved 2000 soldiers, sailors and marines into the strike-bound dock area. Nineteen sweeping regulations were issued to break the crippling two-week strike of 10,222 stevedores that has prevented unloading of 112 ships at the Thames River docks.

It was the first time since the big general strike of 1926 that a state of emergency had been proclaimed to quell a labor dispute.

The drastic action was ordered by the Labor cabinet headed by Prime Minister Attlee, who had charged the strike was fomented by Communists. He described it as "Communist wrecking tactics" to hinder Britain's fight for economic recovery.

May Draft Strikebreakers

The emergency decrees go into effect at midnight tonight and give the government broad powers to get the ships moving.

They permit the drafting of civilians—but not the strikers—to unload the ships. Police and troops are authorized to arrest without warrants anyone they suspect of trying to block work in the dock area.

Just what specific measures the government would take under the emergency decrees probably wouldn't be clear until they become effective Tuesday.

Although only 10,222 of London's dockers joined the wildcat strike movement, other workers threatened sympathy strikes as the government moved to crush it. Tally clerks at the Royal Dock voted not to check loads handled by the soldiers, sailors and marines.

Drivers at Smithfield, London's biggest meat market, decided they would not transport such meat.

Commons Debate Scheduled

The strike began when some stevedores refused to unload two Canadian ships tied up by a jurisdictional dispute between two Canadian sailors' unions. The Dock Labor Board—governing dockyard body composed of management, labor and government representatives—refused to let them unload any other ships until they went back to work on the Canadian ships.

The strike spread despite appeals of the dockers' union leaders to return to work and settle the dispute through established arbitration channels.

The proclamation of a state of national emergency was signed by King George VI on the recommendation of his ministers and after he had summoned his Privy Council.

The proclamation will be debated Wednesday in the Commons.

The emergency regulations include:

Express prohibition of sabotage, trespassing on premises used for essential services, or attempts to dissuade troops or police from doing their duty.

Police may stop and search any vehicle on suspicion. They may arrest without warrant anyone suspected of violating the regulations.

Those accused of violations are subject to immediate trials. If found guilty they may be jailed

Truman to Tell Nation on Air Why He Asks to Scrap Tax Rise But Continue Heavy Spending

Truman Program for Reversing Decline

President Truman's 11 recommendations aimed at reversing the "moderate" economic decline:

1. Repeal the tax on the transportation of goods, liberalize the provisions for carry-over losses by corporations, and raise estate and gift taxes. No major increase in taxes should be undertaken at this time.

2. Extend the maximum time limit now fixed by law on the maturity of loans to business made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

3. Provide for a broad study of investment and development needs and market opportunities in an expanding economy.

4. Adopt an improved program of farm income supports.

5. Increase the minimum wage to at least 75 cents an hour and broaden its coverage.

6. Strengthen the unemployment compensation system by increasing the amount and duration of benefits and extending coverage.

7. Extend to July 25, 1950, the availability of readjustment allowances for veterans not protected by State unemployment compensation law.

8. Raise benefits and extend coverage under the old-age and survivors insurance system and improve the public assistance program.

9. Enact legislation to permit Federal agencies, and assist States and localities, to intensify their advance planning and to acquire sites for useful projects.

10. Enact legislation to provide technical assistance to underdeveloped areas abroad and to encourage investment in such areas.

11. Restore the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

Our People Will Not Tolerate Depression, He Tells Congress

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman will go on the air Wednesday night to talk to the Nation in "plain, understandable English" about the economic situation.

He will explain why, in a remarkable turnabout, he told Congress yesterday to kill his January request for four billion dollars in new taxes.

He will explain, also, why he insisted on a continuance of heavy Federal spending and an unbalanced budget in the face of demands on Capitol Hill that he retrench and get the Government out of the red.

Highlights of Report

These two recommendations—against a major tax increase and against cutbacks in the Federal budget—were the highlights of Mr. Truman's midyear economic report to Congress, in which he acknowledged a "moderate decline" in economic activity. He also sent along 11 legislative proposals, aimed at boosting production, employment and purchasing power.

Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary, announced shortly before 3 o'clock that Mr. Truman would go on the air Wednesday night to talk "on the domestic economic situation and the budget."

"He wants to tell the people in plain, understandable English what the economic situation is," Ross said.

Mr. Truman will talk from the White House at 10:30 p. m. Washington daylight saving time, and his words will be broadcast by all four of the major radio networks. The address also will be carried on television.

Would Add to Troubles

The Council of Economic Advisers had informed the Chief Executive that a rise in taxes at this time would increase the difficulties of business management in trying to adjust prices and keep up operations in a "weakening market." Also, the council said, it would lessen the disposable incomes of consumers.

The economists—Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, Leon H. Keyserling and John D. Clark—told Mr. Truman that the slashing of Government expenditures now would "aggravate" deflationary trends.

Having taken all factors into consideration, the three men reported to the President: "We find the prospect reassuring."

Mr. Truman, besides making recommendations to Congress, called on business not to use price-cutting as an excuse for cutting wages. He said nothing, however, to encourage labor to seek a fourth round of wage increases.

Generally speaking, the President's mid-year economic report

Strike Threatened Saturday

Steel Mediation Efforts Fail, Dispute Is Sent to White House

By Raymond J. Blair
NYHT News Service

An attempt by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to block a steel strike Saturday failed last night, and the dispute was turned over to the White House.

Cyrus S. Ching, director of the service, called steel company officials and leaders of the C.I.O. united steelworkers to a meeting at the Labor Department in a vain effort to work out some kind of agreement.

Shortly before 7 p.m.—two and a half hours after the meeting began—he announced to reporters that the parties were "deadlocked" and that he was about to telephone the White House to report this fact.

Philip Murray, president of the steelworkers and the C.I.O., said a meeting today in Pittsburgh of the Union's wage policy committee and executive board would authorize a strike, if no agreement is reached between now and Saturday.

Murray said 500,000 members of the one million-member union would be affected initially and the balance would stop work across the country as their contracts expired between now and early October.

The strike, the union president said, will continue until a "mutually satisfactory" agreement is worked out.

Murray told reporters the walkout would begin at 12:01 a. m. Saturday, the deadline under the steelworkers' contract with the United States Steel Corp. by which a new wage agreement is to be reached. The contract itself runs into 1950 but there is a wage reopening provision from June 15 through July 15.

Murray said other union agreements with the industry expire at 12:01 a. m. Saturday, and the workers affected by these pacts would begin their strike next Sunday morning.

Ching said that if he is asked by the White House for a recommendation on what course the Govern-

U. S. Reports Another Huge Harvest Due

Prospects Forecast As Second Only to Record 1948 Volume

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The United States is headed toward another tremendous harvest this fall, the Crop Reporting Board forecast yesterday.

The prospects on July 1, the board said, were the second best in history. Total volume of all crops was computed at 131 per cent of the 1923-32 average. This would be second only to the record volume of 1948, when the index was 137 per cent. It compares with 126 per cent in 1946, and 123 per cent in 1942, each of which currently set a record.

The board, however, confirmed reports first printed in The Washington Post three weeks ago, of severe damage to wheat in June.

The board estimated that bad weather cost the wheat crop about 150 million bushels. About 85 million of this loss was due to too much rain in the winter wheat belt, with accompanying plant diseases. The remainder was caused by lack of rain in the spring wheat States of the Northwest and Northeast.

Even at that, the wheat crop may be the third biggest on record.

The board forecast a near record harvest in the Nation's greatest crop-corn. The forecast was for 3530 million bushels, only 120 million short of last year's tremendous crop of 3650 million.

Some of the forecasters suggest privately that the reduced predic-

CIO's Nathan Recommends New Pay Hikes

Economist Says Firms Must Reduce Profits, Boost Buying Power

The CIO yesterday received a report from economist Robert R. Nathan asserting that "corporations as a whole can afford substantial wage increases."

The report was made public at a big luncheon for newspaper and radio correspondents, with labor and management leaders in the audience.

Nathan, former War Production Board adviser, is now a private economist and was retained by the CIO to make the report.

Nathan made a similar report for the CIO two years ago which became an important factor in the labor organization's bid for a post-war wage increase.

This time Nathan said that fourth-round increases "are definitely in the interest of both labor and business, and especially in the interest of the Nation."

The economist said that the average wage earner has no more buying power than in the middle of 1946.

"It is not surprising, under the circumstances, that business cannot sell all it can produce," Nathan said.

Yesterday's report for the CIO was very general in character. Today a special report for the United Steelworkers, which CIO President Philip Murray also heads, will be made public in Pittsburgh.

The steel report will have a direct bearing on the negotiations between the CIO steelworkers and the steel industry. Negotiations have broken off and a strike looms Friday midnight unless the Government is able through conciliation efforts to head it off.

Nathan made it clear that he did not believe all industries could raise wages uniformly.

But his report added:

"If there was ever a time both when wages could be raised without increasing prices and when wage increases would not be likely to result in price increases, this is the time.

"Profits are still at very high levels and, on the basis of over-all data, wage increases can be afforded and still leave excellent profits. The capacity to pay higher wages differs considerably among industries and within industries. Reliance on lower prices rather than higher wages, based on recent experience, means further increases in unemployment and decreases in production."

Johnson 'Unifying' High Command In Play at Resort

America's entire military high command is converging this week on White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for two days of work and play.

The peak will be Wednesday when Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson meets there with the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force and the Joint Chiefs of Staff and their deputies.

This is in line with Johnson's announced plans to have the three chiefs of staff get out of Washington together once each 60 days.

This, Johnson feels, is one way to further unification of the services.

Prague Planning To Cut Church's Ties With Rome

Prague, Czechoslovakia, July 11 (U.P.).—The Communist Party named the Catholic Church as its "most dangerous enemy" today, in a directive to party members.

The directive outlined plans to "liquidate" pro-Vatican elements by "purge" and by isolating Czechoslovakian church leaders from Rome.

The directive, dated June 28, reached the United Press from a reliable source. It was distributed to Communist members in a factory at Zlin (Gottwaldov) in connection with recruiting for the three-day government-sponsored religious festivals July 3-5.

The directive declared:

"We do not want to liquidate the (Catholic) faith . . . We want to tear all threads between the Vatican and the Czechoslovak hierarchy."

[The Associated Press said the Communist government tonight made a veiled threat to cut Catholic charities off without state funds unless the bishops surrender in the church-state fight. The threat was in an official article about Charitas, a Catholic charitable organization.]

You Can't Win!

Millions of Gamblers Keep the Bookies In Quite Comfortable Circumstances

By Ernest E. Blanche

(This is the third of seven condensed installments on Blanche's recent book on facts and fallacies about gambling. The author is Chief Statistician for the Logistics Division of the Army General Staff. As a hobby, he has studied gambling for 20 years. He's convinced—you can't win!—Editor's Note.)

Ten million Americans daily bet on the thoroughbred horses which race around the country's 100-odd tracks.

It is a matter of record that about two billion dollars are annually wagered legally on horse races in 22 States, and it is common knowledge that many times that amount is bet illegally with thousands of bookmakers.

The bookmaker, or bookie, as he is more often called, operates illegally and reports nothing to the State and pays nothing to track owners and horsemen. As a result he pockets the percentage (10 to 15 per cent) they would have received if he had been part of the legal betting mechanism established by the States in which racing is permitted.

Bookies Play It Safe

The bookie gains an additional advantage by limiting the payoff prices on winning selections. Most bookies pay 20-8-and-4. This means that the bookie will not pay more than 20 to 1 if a horse wins (even if the actual odds are 100 to 1 at the track), nor more than 8 to 1 if he is second, nor more than 4 to 1 if he is third.

The bookies guarantee themselves quite a comfortable living.

One bookie who has been taking other people's money for 20 years tells me he has never bet on a horse, but has always been willing to wager that the other fellow can't pick a winner.

He explains that the only possible way anyone can make a small profit is by betting on an occasional favorite to show—that is, to finish third or better. This is the system made famous by "Chicago" O'Brien.

Most bookies won't accept show bets because, they say they tend to lose money on such wagers. The payoff on a show bet on a favorite who wins is comparatively small—often only 10 per cent above the amount wagered; a $2 ticket, for example, wins only

17 Indicted, 11 in Custody

Ex-Deputy Called Ring-Leader At Flogging Suspect Roundup

Birmingham, Ala., July 11 (U.P.).—A former special deputy sheriff was unmasked as the accused ring-leader of Alabama's hooded floggers today in a roundup of 17 men indicted for terrorism.

A suburban police chief also was among those arrested.

By late today, 11 of the 17 had been taken into custody and five of them were ordered held without bond. The five included the two most heavily indicted men on the list, Coleman A. (Brownie) Lollar and A. B. Carradine, 39, both accused of four separate acts of flogging while masked, one of boycotting and one of first degree burglary.

Lollar was identified as the special Jefferson County deputy who acted as armed lookout for a Ku Klux Klan gathering at Adamsville three weeks ago. Sheriff Holt A. McDowell stripped him of his commission after the incident.

Elmer Bailey Brock, 50-year-old chief and only policeman at the Brookside mining community where several hooded outrages have been committed, was waiting at the sheriff's office when his arrest order was signed.

Charged with neglect of duty and with intimidation of a witness, Brock made $300 bond on each count and went home. Brock was one of the 17 named by a special grand jury Saturday on 44 counts covering abductions, floggings and intimidations by masked gangs here.

Another arrested was Robert E.

Link to 1943 Case Blocked

Prichard Admitted a Share In Vote Stuffing, Says Judge

Lexington, Ky., July 11 (AP).—A judicial ruling late today blocked a prosecution proposal to link E. F. Prichard, jr., to previous acts of ballot box stuffing.

The Government earlier landed a staggering blow with testimony that Prichard admitted a part in the Bourbon County vote fraud last November, charged against him in the Federal court trial.

Prosecutors out of hearing of the jury sought to put in testimony that the portly, one-time aide to top-drawer New Deal officials committed a ballot box stuffing in 1943 and attempted to repeat it in 1946.

Federal Judge H. Church Ford ruled this testimony would involve trial of two other cases and would be prejudicial.

Circuit Judge W. R. Ardery of Paris testified today Prichard related to him that he took part in the stuffing of 254 forged ballots in the presidential election last fall. Prichard, former counsel for the Democratic National Committee, and A. E. Funk, jr., 27, his Lexington law partner, are on trial on a charge of conspiring to forge and cast the ballots.

The prosecution, in a brief, proposed to offer testimony that Prichard committed a ballot box stuffing in 1943. It said he attempted to repeat it in 1946 only to be frustrated by a precinct officer who refused to let him take the ballot book away after Prichard announced his purpose.

The evidence would obviously

and his shift from an anti-inflation to an anti-recession policy were well received in Congress and in Wall Street. Some of the Republicans — Representative Halleck (R., Ind.), for example—taunted Mr. Truman for his "belated conversion,' and some conservative traders complained about too many "welfare state" proposals. The stock market itself didn't react one way or the other.

The most controversial part of Mr. Truman's message, it appeared, would be that dealing with Federal expenditures and deficit financing.

When he said that "No major increase in taxes should be undertaken at this time," he was echoing a sentiment that had been widespread among both Democrats and Republicans from the day the Eighty-first Congress convened.

In the matter of Federal spending, however, there remains a sharp difference of opinion as between the White Hohse and Capitol Hill. This was shown yesterday when the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a 10 per cent cut in Marshall Plan funds for European recovery.

"We cannot expect to achieve a budget surplus in a declining national economy," Mr. Truman told Congress.

He said the maintenance of strong, armed forces and extension of aid to our allies abroad was of such paramount importance that "it is out of the question to slash" appropriations for national defense and international activities at this time.

He said also that it would be "folly" to cut "essential" national programs now. Such a course of action, he said, would deepen the slump by bringing about lower output and lower employment.

The 60 billion dollars now being spent annually by Federal, State and local governments, Mr. Truman said, was one of the important props to the national economy.

The 62-page economic report was in two parts—a lengthy review by the Council of Economic Advisers and Mr. Truman's summary of this, plus his 11 recommendations to Congress.

Coupled with his recommendation against a major tax increase, was a request that the tax on transportation of goods be repealed and that the provision for carry-over of losses by corporations be liberalized. He asked, also, that estate and gift taxes be raised.

Backs Brannan Plan

He urged that time of repayment of RFC loans be extended; that a study be authorized by Congress of investment and development needs and market opportunities; that the Brannan plan for agriculture be adopted; that the minimum wage be boosted from 40 to 75 cents an hour; and that the unemployment compensation system be liberalized by extending coverage and increasing the amount and duration of the payments.

Asks "52-20" Extension

Mr. Truman also asked Congress to extend until July 25, 1950, the "52-20" program for veterans—so called because it provided unemployment pay to veterans at the rate of $20 a week for 52 weeks.

He urged, further, that the old-age and survivors insurance system be improved by raising the benefits and extending coverage; that Federal agencies be authorized to assist States and localities to plan for public works projects; that action be taken to implement Point 4 in his inaugural address, his proposal for helping the undeveloped areas of the world, and that Congress restore the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

Winding up his message, Mr. Truman said:

"We cannot have prosperity by getting adjusted to the idea of a depression—by cutting investment or employment or wages or essential Government programs. We can prosper only by planning and working for prosperity . . .

"The whole world is watching developments in the American economy. Our own people . . . will not tolerate a depression. Our friends abroad know that their well-being and hopes for world peace are greatly dependent upon the economic strength of the United States. Those opposed to our system and way of life are hoping for the vindication of their prophecies that economic collapse is inevitable in a free society.

"Ours is at once a fateful responsibility and an inspiring opportunity to prove to ourselves and to the world that prosperity and freedom will endure together."

U. S. Economy Strongest

Mr. Truman, at the outset of his message, said that the United States economy was the strongest and most productive the world has ever known. Moreover, he said, this country has the resources and the skills to make the economy still stronger and more productive.

He said that, with the abatement of inflation, the United States was now in a "transition" period. He continued:

"The fundamental task facing us all — businessmen, workers, farmers, Government—is to apply positive policies with confidence and courage in order to achieve a sounder price structure and the restoration of maximum production and employment. In so doing, we need to start with a clear understanding of the facts concerning our present situation.

Recession Safeguards

"Our economy today possesses vitally important elements of strength that did not exist in earlier periods. Over the course of the last 16 years, many steps have been taken by the Government to bulwark our economy against the forces of recession.

"Unemployment insurance has helped to alleviate the hardships of unemployment, and to sustain consumer incomes and expenditures. The old-age retirement system and public assistance for needy persons also serve to maintain purchasing power. The housing program recently enacted by Congress will furnish positive support for housing construction and slum clearance.

"The Federal Reserve System has been developed into an instrument of such strength and elastic power that the risk of credit restriction at the very time when business requires easier credit has been greatly reduced.

Banking and Credit

"The insurance of bank deposits has eliminated the danger of widespread loss from bank failures. The several credit institutions established within the Government go far toward preventing waves of bankruptcies and foreclosures.

"The farm price-support program affords assurance that our six million farmers and the two-fifths of our population in rural communities will not be forced out of the markets for goods."

Mr. Truman pointed out, too, that public expenditures of Federal, State, and local governments were running at a rate of close to 60 billion dollars a year, and said that this in itself was an element of great stability in the present situation.

He said the country's position would be even stronger if Congress had given him the necessary powers to control inflation between 1945 and 1949.

"Affirmative Action"

The Chief Executive, after listing favorable aspects of the situation, said that these should not be permitted to lull the country into a false sense of security.

"There is nothing healthy about more unemployment or less production . . ." he said. "The way to check a decline in business investment or production is to take affirmative action that will lead to more investment and more production.

"The way to check an increase in unemployment is to take affirmative action that will provide more jobs. The way to prevent our economy from shrinking is to take affirmative action that will help it expand.

"These things cannot be done by business, labor, agriculture, or Government acting alone. They can only be done by all of us working together in mutual respect with common objectives."

Developments Reviewed

After giving Congress a review of recent economic developments, and citing figures on unemployment, the decline in business profits and farm profits, Mr. Truman went on to say:

"These facts show that our economy is still operating at high levels of employment and production. The kind of Government action that would be called for in a serious emergency would not be appropriate now.

"However, it would be even less appropriate to rely entirely on 'letting nature take its course' to restore economic stability and maximum production and employment. Within the memory of this generation we have experienced both the terrible consequences of inaction, and the saving value of affirmative policy. It is consistent with the whole history of American progress to recognize that, now as before, action can and should be taken to make our economy still stronger . . ."

He said that, while some businessmen might find it difficult to expand their operations under present circumstances, the Government can always take conscious and positive action to counteract recessionary forces.

"Yet," he went on to say, "there are those who assert that the decline in national income requires that we cut essential national programs. Nothing could represent greater economic folly than to follow this course of action. It would contribute to the very recessionary forces that we should be counteracting.

"It would be a defeatist admission that we cannot prevent our economy from running down hill and that those programs which are vital to the international security and domestic welfare of our people, as well as to the strength of our economy, must be steered in the same downward direction.

"This issue is fundamental. Are we going to admitathat the forces of progress in our economy have become so feeble that we must content ourselves with lower levels of education, health and housing, international and domestic security, and national development?

"Or are we going to move forward toward making our economy as strong and productive as our resources and skills permit, and adopt the programs which are consistent with that kind of economy and necessary for its attainment?

"I propose that we follow the latter course."

Businessmen, the President said, should raise their sights to the needs of an economy that grow and prospers from year to year. And in this connection, he renewed an earlier recommendation that Congress provide for a broad study of potential business investment, expansion and market opportunities.

He urged businessmen to maintain production and sales volume by adjusting prices downward, even at the cost of temporarily reduced profits.

"Maintaining volume in the present situation," he said, "is far more important than maintaining profit margins. The only ultimate source of sustained profits is sustained employment and purchasing power.

"The same concept should guide wage policies. Business cannot be prosperous unless the purchasing power of workers is maintained. While price reductions are desirable, they should not be attained at the expense of wage cutting. Management and labor, through collective bargaining, should seek agreements which recognize that the benefits of improved technology and productivity should be reflected both in the wage structure and in the price structure."

In recognizing—and, in fact, insisting—that the Government must operate in the red, Mr. Truman recalled that the budget was balanced in the fiscal years of 1947 and 1948. He recalled, too, how he had vetoed the five-billion-dollar tax cut approved by the Republican-dominated Eightieth Congress, only to have the lawmakers pass it over his veto.

Reason for Deficit

He said that the present deficit of Federal income below outgo was caused primarily by this untimely tax cut during the height of inflation. It was aggravated, he said, by the loss in revenue resulting from the decline in production and national income.

Mr. Truman said that the present high level of Federal spending was due in large measure to the extraordinary costs of the armed forces and such international measures as Marshall Plan aid.

He added:

"These activities are of such paramount importance that it is out of the question to slash them at this time. But, as our policy for peace takes effect, it should be possible in future years to reduce these expenditures which now make such heavy demands upon our Federal budget . . .

"But if we tried to avoid a budget deficit by cutting essential expenditures, we would contribute to lower national output and lower employment Federal receipts would fall further, and the burden upon Federal expenditures would increase. . . .

"There are economic and social deficits that would be far more serious than a temporary deficit in the Federal budget. Could we be truly prosperous with gaping deficits in our educational system or our housing or our health services or our program for resource development?

"If we should allow these deficits to multiply, they would drag the whole economy down, and there would be no hope for balancing the Government budget. But if we prevent these deficits, if we realize the productive potentials of the American economy, the whole Nation will prosper, and not only will we balance the Federal budget, but we can also move forward to improve the tax system and to resume reduction of the national debt."

Truman Views . . .

By The Associated Press

Here is President Truman's position today on some key policies, placed alongside the views in his economic report of six months ago:

	JANUARY, 1949	TODAY
BUDGET SURPLUS	"Essential to sound fiscal policy."	"We cannot expect a budget surplus in a declining national economy."
TAXES	"I recommend legislation to increase (taxes) by four billion dollars a year."	"No major increase in taxes should be undertaken at this time."
CREDIT	Bank and consumer credit "should be controlled."	"Ample credit supplies are favorable to business investment."
PRICE, WAGE CONTROLS	"I recommend selective price control authority (and power) to limit wage adjustments."	"The necessary anti-inflation program was not adopted. The dangers are now being revealed."
MATERIALS ALLOCATION	"The need for mandatory control still exists."	Not mentioned. See above.

Congress Agrees Fully On Taxation Reversal

By The Associated Press

Congress quickly agreed yesterday with President Truman on one thing—a four-billion-dollar tax increase is not in order—and gave the rest of his economic message a careful going-over.

Administration leaders got their heads together with Mr. Truman at once on his program designed to help get the country back on the upward trend.

Emerging from the White House, House Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) said he expected passage of a minimum wage increase, a new farm bill and extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act.

Lucas Has Some Doubts

Rayburn said he expected the House to pass expansion of social security benefits, but Senate Democratic Leader Lucas said it was somewhat doubtful there would be time to complete action this session. Rayburn observed that repeal of the freight tax on goods would be popular.

The speaker foresaw complications for the proposed increase of unemployment compensation. He would not attempt to estimate the prospects for raising estate and gift taxes.

Rayburn told Mr. Truman the House will try to get a farm bill passed this week. Mr. Truman asked for "an improved program" of farm income supports. Any bill passed is generally expected to embrace some features of the Brannan farm plan which the Administration urges.

Hailed As Stimulant

Capitol Hill and the Nation had awaited the President's economic diagnosis anxiously because of the uncertainty of business prospects. A number of Congress members hailed the President's change-about on a general tax increase as a stimulant.

Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee, which writes tax laws, observed that "a lot of people have been saying that the threat of a tax increase has crippled business. It looks like this message gives business a green light."

Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee said he, too, thinks the decision to drop plans for major tax increases will reassure business.

Republicans indulged in some partisan snickers. Representative Halleck (R., Ind.) spoke of Mr. Truman's "belated conversion.' He said the President has been behind schedule on "the conomic facts of life" ever since the war.

Always Wrong, Taft Says

Senator Taft of Ohio, Republican policy chief in the Senate said there is nothing new in the program except that Mr. Truman dropped his demand for new income taxes "which always was wrong."

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, Republican floor leader, put in a bid for more economy.

To Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee, the Truman program "offers a sensible course of economic action."

The Truman proposal for higher estate and gift taxes drew some frowns.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) said he questioned the advisability of adding any taxes at this time. The Government ought to be cutting expenditures instead, he added.

Senator Millikin (R., Colo.), too, said he regretted that Mr. Truman "doesn't adjust his spending policies" to achieve tax reductions.

Senators Vote 10% ECA Cut

proved that amount. The Senate unit provided only 45 million.

ECA funds for the last quarter of the 1949 fiscal year (April through June), sliced 74 million dollars. The President asked $1,074,000,000 and the House voted the full amount. The Senate committee approved one billion.

Budget requests for foreign-aid activities totaled $6,322,200,000. McKellar said the committee sheared them back to $5,573,380,000, for a total cut of $748,820,000.

ECA Administrator Hoffman did not comment immediately. Holding out for the House ECA figure of $3,568,470,000, which he could spend in 10½ months, Hoffman has broadly hinted he would quit if further reductions make it impossible for him to "do the job."

There is still a possibility the cuts may be eased either on the Senate floor or in conference with the House.

But some members of the committee wanted to cut the budget figure even more. McKellar, for example, proposed a slash of 800 million dollars in ECA alone.

The 10 per cent cut finally voted was approved 10 to 9. It was cosponsored by two Republicans — Homer Ferguson (Mich.) and Styles Bridges (N. H.). Staunch champions of Hoffman, both of them strongly opposed cutting ECA so deeply the administrator would step out.

Kem Amendment Loses on Tie

The 74-million-dollar slash in ECA fourth quarter appropriations came in the face of a last-minute protest by Hoffman. The administrator is said to have phoned the committee that the full $1,074,000,000 already has been allocated.

The committee even came within an ace of barring ECA help to countries which nationalize any basic industries after the bill is passed. Offered by Senator James P. Kem (R., MO.), the amendment was aimed at Britain's nationalization program. Kem's amendment lost on a 9-to-9 tie vote.

U. S. Reports Another Immense Harvest Due

tion for wheat is still too optimistic—that when the harvest is in the final figures will fall below yesterday's estimate.

The same men, however, see prospects that the corn harvest may even exceed yesterday's estimate, in fact, be even greater than last year's all-time record.

There is a good basis for both beliefs. Reports from the wheat country are that the harvested grain isn't weighing out as well as was expected July 1. As for corn, the July report last year predicted less than the July report of yesterday. A year ago the prediction for corn was only 3328 million bushels; the ultimate harvest 3650.

The report immediately raised questions as to the farm program for the coming year. Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan last week put off asking a wheat growers referendum on acreage allotments and marketing quotas on wheat until after yesterday's report.

The report showed wheat stocks on farms far below last year. In fact, wheat stocks on farms July 1 were only 51.1 per cent of the 1948 crop. The wheat stocks on farms a year ago were 6.9 per cent of the 1947 crop, and the average for the 10 years, 1938-47 was 10.2.

Restrictions Weighed

Department statisticians were working their pencils last night trying to figure out if the supplies and prospects make restrictions necessary. Some expect acreage limitations may be ordered, but in view of yesterday's reduced wheat prospects, few expect marketing quotas now.

The picture is entirely different as to corn and oats. On July 1, the farm stocks of corn totaled 1239 million bushels, compared with 423 million a year ago, and 708 million average. Stocks of oats were 270 million bushels compared with 170 at this time last year.

Standing out like a sore thumb was the drop in potato production. Last year's potato crop totaled 446 million bushels; yesterday's estimate was for 369 million. This is still about 70 million more than needed to meet demand.

Summary of Crop Report

Here's a brief summary of yesterday's report:

"The corn acreage planted was nearly two million acres above intentions, and a near-record production of 3530 million bushels is indicated.

"Cotton acreage is one-seventh larger than in 1948, and development is advanced for this date.

"Rice sets a new record in both acreage and production.

"Oats will be nearly a 1.4 billion bushel crop.

"Hay production will be slightly less than last season.

"Aggregate production, based on current forecasts, may be 31 per cent above the 1923-32 average, exceeded only by the record set last year."

The report then divided up the forecast between food and feed crops.

"Heaviest contribution to the near-record aggregate crop production is made by the feed grains as a group," it said.

"With the heavy carryover, supplies of feed grains will be among the most liberal ever available per animal unit.

"Food grains are considerably below last year's level, with the wheat crop reduced the third largest, rye production slipping below 20 million bushels, and buckwheat planted on a relatively small acreage; but the rice crop of 86 million sets a new record.

Among Oilseeds

"Among the oilseeds, the flaxseed crop is expected to be the third largest of record. Acreage of soybeans will be less than last year, but above average; peanut acreage is only four-fifth of last years', but cotton acreage is the largest since 1937.

"Tobacco production will be a little above last year, and considerably above average.

"Prospects for deciduous fruits, except apricots and prunes, are better than average.'

America's 52 principal crops were planted on 366 million acres this year—the greatest acreage since 1932, when 375½ million were planted.

The average yield per acre is far below last year, however. The prospective yield for corn is 41.2 bushels, compared with 42.7 last year; wheat 15.7 bushels against 17.9 a year ago; oats 34 contrasted with 37.1; barley 24.4 against 26.3.

The Nation's average potato yield per acre is down this year to 194.3 bushels, compared with 212.4 a year ago. This is largely attributed to the drought in New Jersey, Delaware, southern shore of Maryland, Long Island.

The yield for flaxseed is estimated at 9.7 compared with 11.1 last year and other crops follow similar trends.

Growing conditions were good for citrus crops in June, but prospects vary greatly. The best outlook is in Florida; the worst in Texas. California trees bloomed late; fruit is small as a result.

Oranges are estimated at 99½ million boxes, 10 per cent less than last year, but 11 per cent above average. Grapefruit is estimated at 46 million boxes, one fourth less than last year, and 3 per cent below average.

Milk production dropped sharply in the latter part of the month, because of hot weather and reduced pasturage. In the first six months production was about 60.9 billion pounds of milk—1.6 billion above a year ago.

Egg production was about 2 per cent below last year.

Dollar Crisis Steps Readied by Cripps

By Ned Russell

London, July 11 (NYHT).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, prepared today for the next two moves in the dollar crisis of Britain and the sterling area.

On Wednesday, he will head a strong British government delegation at the opening of a conference with eight other finance ministers of the British Commonwealth to map concerted plans for handling the crisis.

On Thursday, he will open a two-day debate in the House of Commons where he will lead the defense of the government against sharp attacks from the Conservative Party. The debate will end Monday.

The crucial atmosphere surrounding these two events was made more acute today by publication of the communique describing Sir Stafford's three-day conference with John W. Snyder, American Secretary of the Treasury, and Douglas C. Abbott, Canadian Finance Minister.

Most responsible commentators were disappointed in the result of the conference, even though most of them admitted they had not expected much. They all agreed the obscure communique meant nothing had been agreed in the search for a permanent solution to the crisis.

The Conservative London "Daily Mail" bitterly attacked the vague language of yesterday's communique on the tripartite talks for failing to impress upon the British people that "the only fact that matters is that Britain is nearly broke."

"It reads like the report of a discussion group on the economic condition of Mars" the "Daily Mail" said.

Food Spoils in Sun

7 Russians Block Berlin Truck Traffic

Berlin, July 11 (AP).—Seven bored Russian soldiers kept a stranglehold tonight on the only truck supply route still open from western Germany to Berlin.

This tiny Soviet guard detachment at Helmstedt, frontier post on the main highway to Berlin, limited passage of trucks to four an hour—96 a day. Before the unexplained "slow-down blockade" was clamped down, daily traffic averaged about 300 Berlin-bound trucks at Helmstedt.

A strong smell of rotting fish, fruit and vegetables hung over the checkpoint as more than 100 food-laden trucks lined up under the hot sun waiting their turns to pass.

Many had been turned back from other Soviet zone crossing points closed to Berlin-bound trucks since Friday. Only at Helmstedt was restricted truck traffic permitted by the Rusians.

A British protest that the truck curb violated the four-power agreement on lifting the blockade went unanswered tonight. Some Allied officials regarded the Soviet slowdown as a pressure move for Western acceptance of Russian proposals for more interzonal trade and a higher value for the lowly east mark.

The airlift roared on, bringing about 8000tons of food and fuel daily to Berlin's western sectors.

Train and barge traffic from western Germany was about back to normal. Freight trains hauled an average of 5230 tons a day to west Berlin last week, while barges daily added about 2930 tons.

The new harassmene of Berlin's supply lines produced a tense atmosphere for Tuesday's meeting of the four military commanders, scheduled to confer for the first time on ways and means of carrying out the Paris foreign ministers agreement to normalize life in Berlin.

U. S. Armored Cars Halted Before Vienna

Vienna, Austria (Tuesday), July 12 (U.P.).—Russian army guards turned back two American Army armored cars yesterday as they sought to return to Vienna from maneuvers, it was made known early today.

American authorities at once protested to the Russians. So far they had received no explanation. Other traffic moved normally.

As in the case of Berlin, Vienna is under four-power control but is surrounded by the Soviet occupation zone.

Allied-Soviet relations in Austria have been reasonably friendly and there had been no recent attempt to halt Allied traffic.

Lack of Ticket May Change O'Dwyer's Plans

New York, July 11 (AP).—Mayor William O'Dwyer today insisted he is adhering to his decision not to seek a second term.

However, he added that if Democratic Party leaders do not select a candidate in the best interest of the city "we will reconsider the whole business in the interest of the city. The city comes first."

The mayor criticized Democratic leaders for not already having selected a ticket.

three months or fined up to $400, or both.

Mail, telephone and telegraph service may be refused to anyone suspected of violating regulations.

Electricity and gas boards may cut down usual service or refuse it.

Troops are assigned to control traffic in the affected areas.

Peaceful picketing is not forbidden—but any attempts by pickets to induce others to join the strike are construed as violations.

Scarborough, England, July 11 (AP).—Communists were banned today from holding office in Britain's largest trade union, the Transport and General Workers Union.

Conference delegates voted to bar members of the British Fascist Union from holding office. The vote was 426 to 208.

Pact Operations Given Study, Connolly Says

London, July 11 (U.P.).—Adm. Richard L. Conolly, commander of United States naval forces in Europe, said today the United States and other Atlantic Pact nations already have "tentatively discussed" establishment of standard communications and tactical procedures.

He told a group of U. S. newsmen starting a tour of American naval centers in Europe that Senate ratification of the mutual defense treaty would be followed by "direct cooperation" among the naval powers of the United States and Western Europe.

Taft Opposes Atlantic Pact

reservation denying any obligation to supply arms.

Taft spoke as Senate debate on the pact went into its second week, with no vote now likely before Wednesday or Thursday.

Ratification by a margin far over the required two-thirds majority appeared certain but Administration leaders conceded Taft's speech may have swollen the "No" count by influencing a scattering of still doubtful Republicans.

Reserves Opinion on Arms

In other speeches on the pact:

1. Senator Smith (N. J.) said he is "enthusiastically and unconditionally" supporting the pact, but is reserving his position on the arms program until he can weigh it "in proper perspective." He said his only regret is the State Department is not placing more emphasis on the ideological "cold war." Said Smith: "This debate is out of balance because of its dominating emphasis on military strength."

2. Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) proposed the United States call a meeting of western signatories immediately following ratification of the pact "to form another, more perfect union, a great Atlantic Union of the Free." He said he regards the pact only as a measure that will gain the time needed to explore the possibilty of such a North Atlantic federation.

Gillette Has Misgivings

3. Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) said he will vote for the treaty but only "with the greatest reluctance, with deep misgivings, with grave doubts and qualms." Said Gillette: "We are now virtually obliged to ratify the treaty, if we are not to make our Nation the butt of ridicule and scorn around the world."

Taft, in a seven-point attack on the treaty, said the pact standing alone would be a deterrent to war, but with the arms program it becomes a military alliance leading to war.

Under questioning by Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), he said he meant that if the United States simply extended the Monroe Doctrine to Europe, Russia would know it would have to fight the United States if it started a war, and would be less likely to start one.

Fears Quick Red Reaction

'But if Russia sees itself ringed about gradually by so-called defensive arms, from Norway and Denmark to Turkey and Greece," he said, "they might well decide that if war is the certain result, that war might better occur now rather than after the arming of Europe is completed."

Other Taft points:

1. The treaty means an armament race, and these have historically led to war.

2. The pact, with the arms obligation, violates our obligations under the United Nations Charter.

3. Obligations to supply both arms and economic assistance would be "beyond our economic capacity."

4. If Russia decides to go to war, arms furnished Europe could easily be captured by Russia "and turned against us."

5. The pact "appears to contemplate an invasion along lines which Napoleon and Hitler found impossible."

6. By undertaking to supply arms, we free the Western powers of the burden of providing their own defense, and "the more free they will be to ship steel and heavy machinery" to Russia.

Jet-Superfort Test Results 'Hush-Hush'

London, July 10 (AP).—Buried in the British air ministry's secret files may be an answer to this question: Can America's seven-year-old Superforts really outfly Britain's best jet fighters at high altitudes?

During Operation Foil, the air games testing Britain's defenses, some observers said the latest interceptors failed against the four-engine heavy bombers at 35,000 feet. But the question quickly went on the hush-hush list. Nobody will talk.

The question had brought an emphatic "no" from Air Vice Marshal Sir Basil Embry, boss of the British fighter command, before the silence became official. He had said "we have shown we can master the Superforts both in speed and height."

Some correspondents who flew with the big American bombers during Operation Foil—both British and American—disagree with Sir Basil.

They say the B-29s flying at 35,000 feet or above—not an abnormal altitude for heavy bombers these days—experienced only "feeble and sluggish" attacks from jet fighters barely able at that height to beat the bombers' speed or more than 400 miles an hour.

Technicians said the operations were purposely set up to give the fighters every chance at interception. The bombers' turn will come next September when a second set of air games will test offensive strength.

Those who claimed the British jets were outflown by the Superforts at top altitudes based their opinions on the apparent difficulty with which the thin-winged fighter maneuvered above 35,000 feet.

The jets straight flight speeds remain high. But on turns their thin wings find trouble giving enough support to their weight.

Gaullists Lose Heavily * In French By-Election

Paris, July 11 (NYHT).—General Charles de Gaulle's Rally of the French People (RFP) lost heavily in yesterday's municipal by-election at Cahors, capital of the Department of Lot in southwestern France, according to official figures announced today.

The RPF elected 3 out of 27 municipal councilors, compared with 7 in the previous election, held in October, 1947. The Communists picked up one seat.

Austria Debt Compromise Is Sighted

London, July 11 (AP).—Big Four deputies sighted a compromise today on how Austria should pay Russia a 150-million-dollar war bill.

The amount itself was agreed upon by the Foreign Ministers' Council in Paris last month.

The Western powers agreed today to Russia's demand that the Austrian National Bank back the Vienna government's payments with notes.

They also agreed that Austria should pay Russia quarterly installments of $6,250,000 each—for the first year at least. Russia wants Austria to pay quarterly for the whole six years in which the sum has to be liquidated. The West wants Austria to pay annually after the first year.

In return for the $150 million dollars Russia is going to make over to Austria all the former German assets, properties and interests she now holds or claims in Austria.

Soviet Priest Runs Roman Catholic Church in Moscow

Moscow, July 11 (AP).—The Church of St. Louis of France, only Roman Catholic church in Moscow, is now in charge of a Soviet Roman Catholic priest.

A Father Adamovich, who asserted he had letters of authority from the Bishop of Riga, informed the Rev. Jean de Matha Thomas yesterday that he was taking over. Father Thomas is a French Assumptionist priest who administered the church for the past two years.

According to the Rev. Thomas, Father Adamovich said he himself would take charge of the masses at 9 a. m. and 10 a. m. and that Father Thomas could officiate at the noon service as usual for the foreign colony. This schedule was followed yesterday.

(Michael Francis Doyle, an American Catholic layman, reported recently that Soviet officials had demanded the keys of the church. Doyle described it as "the only free and open church in the Soviet Union."

(The Rev. George A. Laberge, an American, was in charge at the church until early this year when he returned to the United States.

Yugoslavia To Seal Greek Frontier Now

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 11 (U.P.).—Yugoslavia will seal its frontier with Greece immediately, a special envoy from Marshal Tito informed the U. S. Embassy here today.

Sava Kosanovich, Yugoslav Ambassador to Washington, conferred with American Ambassador Cavendish Cannon immediately after his arrival in Belgrade from Pola where Tito made a major foreign policy speech yesterday.

In a one-and-a-half hour talk with Cannon, Kosanovich made it clear that Tito's declaration yesterday that the Greek frontier "must be closed completely" was not a future actitn, but an immediate one.

Kosanovich repeated Tito's assertion that numerous incursions on Yugoslav territory by "the monarco-fascist" Greek government troops and planes was the reason for the border closing order.

Tito, by closing the Greek frontier and at the same time accusing the rebel Greeks of falling under the sway of the Cominform, indicated that no Yugoslav aid is going to the Communist guerrillas.

Western observers also were heartened by Tito's apparent willingness to reach a final tgreement on Trieste through discussions with Italy.

Reliable sources said Cannon and Kosanovich reviewed the whole field of Yugoslav-American relations with Cannon exploring the possibilities of friendlier relations between the two nations as a result of Tito's speech.

Tito Sealed Frontier To Get Loan, Greeks Say

Officials of the Greek government, the American Embassy and the United Nations Special Commission on the Balkans here refused to commen on Marshal Tito's latest statement.

Greek newspapers said the apparent change in policy toward Greece was dictated by the Yugoslav leader's need of a loan from the West to advance his industrial plans.

(In Washington State Department officials speculated that actual closing of the border would increase Yugoslav chances of American backing for a loan from the World Bank.)

A Greek general staff review of the last six months indicated aid for the guesillas from Yugoslavia has dropped sharply. It said nearly 70 per cent of the guerillas are now concentrated in the Grammos and Vitsi mountains—where they can draw support from Albania. Formerly they were chiefly concentrated south of the Yugoslav border.

Total guerilla forces were estimated now at 18,000.

Pacific Union Urged to Offset Reds

Baguio, Philippines, July 11 (U.P.).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China and President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines called upon Far Eastern countries today to unite at once in a Pacific union to fight communism.

Authoritative sources said the two leaders had agreed that Nationalist China, the Philippines and Korea would initiate formal establishment of the anti-Red alliance. Eventually they hope the United States, Australia and Japan will join.

Philippine Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs Felino Neri said prospective members of the union would be contacted through diplomatic channels and an international conference would be necessary.

Chiang and Quirino held one meeting Sunday and two today and issued a joint statement; "We deem it necessary that these countries should at once organize themselves in a union for the purpose of achieving solidarity and mutual assistance to contain and counteract the common threat."

Quirino stressed that the two countries had not allied themselves militarily.

U. S. Friendly To Pacific Plan

dent acted independently and without any American backing, reporters here were told. Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, said that "we're completely on the sidelines" and still lack reports from United States Ambassador Myron M. Cowen at Manila.

McDermott said Acheson's objections to a formal defense treaty still stand. But he added:

"We have every sympathy with and interest in efforts of peoples of the Pacific area to develop close cooperative relationship and to move toward common counsel and mutual assistance on the vital problems of the area."

That appeared to give American blessing to the union project. McDermott stressed the State Department's stand was only on the general idea of joint action voiced by Quirino in a July 4 address, and not on his joint statement with Chiang.

Korea and Australia were believed promising prospects for the projected Pacific union.

Korea's president, Syngman Rhee, sent Acheson a message yesterday saying his new government would like some kind of collective security in the Pacific as a safety measure against Communist pressure from the Soviet-backed "people's republic' in North Korea.

Australian Reds Face Arrest For Plotting Against Nation

Sydney, Australia, July 11 (U.P.). The Australian government plans to charge the Communist Party with conspiring against the peace and order of the Nation, authoritative informants said tonight.

The action, based on secret documents seized in a raid on the Communist Party's national headquarters, was planned as a disastrous 15-day-old coal strike virtually paralyzed Australian industry.

Communists said they expected the police "at any hour" to break into their homes or offices to make the arrests.

The government cracked down on the Communist Party earlier today by obtaining a court order preventing them from withdrawing bank deposits to aid the 24,000 striking coal miners.

The order, based on a national emergency act freezing funds that might be used to help the strike, named Communist Party leaders, including party Secretary Lance Sharkey, and Idris Williams, president of the Miners' Federation.

A federal arbitration court sentenced Williams and another miners' union official to 12 months imprisonment for contempt of court.

Williams and George Grant, federation secretary general, were jailed for refusing to reveal the whereabouts of about 13,000 pounds (about $48,750) they withdrew from banked union funds two weeks ago in defiance of the government freezing order.

Strikers Go Back; Building Resumed

About 6900 of the District's 8500 union carpenters and laborers were at work yesterday as all major building projects here were resumed after a 39-day strike which delayed an estimated 100 million dollars in construction.

The estimate was made by leaders of the two unions, who expressed confidence that practically all their members would be working by mid-week.

B. B. Blackburn, secretary-treasurer of the Carpenters' District Council, who estimated that not more than 500 union carpenters were still out of work when the strike ended, said about 75 per cent of them went back to jobs yesterday.

As for the laborers, President Leo Nazdin of the Laborers' Council said he figured about 1000 striking men went back yesterday, in addition to some 500 who had been employed by contractors from whom the union had obtained wage raise agreements before general pacts were signed Saturday.

Both unions accepted increases of 10 cents an hour, giving the carpenters $2.50 and the laborers $1.45 hourly.

Among projects which got going again yesterday were the Dupont Circle underpass, the Whitehurst Freeway (K st. overpass), the new 14th st. Potomac bridge, remodeling of House and Senate chambers at the Capitol, and public school construction and additions.

Also under way once more are the General Accounting Office building at 5th and G sts. nw., the National Institute of Health research at Bethesda, Md., and the new Naval Ordnance Plant at White Oak, Md.

Officials generally agreed that the strike had delayed the larger projects about two months. Work on the S. Capitol st. bridge is expected to be completed on schedule in December, as the contractor settled with the strikers early during the walkout.

Builders and union men said it would take a day or two for work to get into full swing, but that building workers probably would have plenty to do for the rest of the season.

While no negotiations took place yesterday between the Master Builders' Association and the five other building trades unions whose contracts are still unrenewed, builders ae confident that agreements will be reached this week with at least some of them.

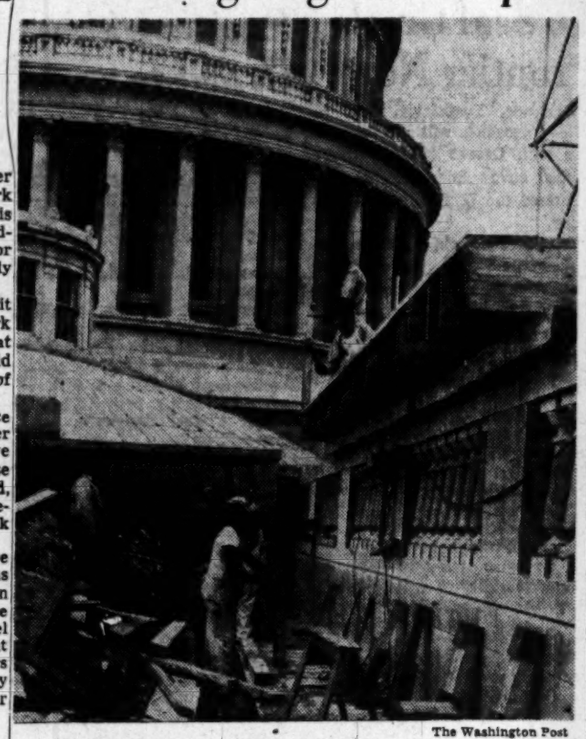
The trades whose contracts have expired, and whose negotiations with the builders have been in abeyance during the strike, are the rodmen (reinforced steel workers), truck drivers, cement finishers, structural iron workers and operating engineers. They did not join the carpenter-laborer walkout.

Olsen Appointed Public Health Engineer

A nine-month vacancy in the District Health Department was filled yesterday when Frederick J. Olsen took over the post of public health engineer. He replaces Ambrose P. Bell, who resigned last November.

Olsen, a graduate of New York University, served with the Army Corps of Engineers and has been employed in private industry in the design of precision mechanical equipment. In recent months the 36-year-old engineer has been teaching in the New York University college of engineering while doing graduate study.

Remodeling Begins at Capitol



The Washington Post

BACK ON THE JOB—Union carpenters, back at work after their 39-day strike in the District, are shown as they were building a platform yesterday for the elevator which will haul building materials to the roof of the House wing of the United States Capitol. Remodeling of the Senate wing also is scheduled

No Uranium Stolen, Joint Committee Finds

The Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy yesterday released a report from its own expert concluding that there was virtually no loss of uranium, by theft or otherwise, as a result of the disappearance of some U-235 from the Argonne Laboratory.

The report was issued as the committee came to the end of the public phase of its investigation into Chairman David E. Lilienthal's conduct of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Dr. Ernest W. Thiele, the committee's expert, made a 19-page report regarding the recovery of the missing uranium.

In summarizing, he said there was no reasonable doubt that the material recovered from a can of ordinary uranium scrap is the identical substance which was missing at the University of Chicago laboratory.

Within the tolerances of chemical weighing, Thiele said, it would appear that virtually all the material had been recovered.

"The best available data," he said, "does not indicate the loss of any uranium, by theft or otherwise, but neither do they exclude the possibility that some small amount may have been stolen. The attendant circumstances make it extremely unlikely that any was stolen. The remaining uncertainty cannot be substantially reduced by any further measurement."

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), with obvious weariness, yesterday announced the committee today would start closed session hearings into individual cases of persons cleared for atomic work.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), the commission's chief critic, has claimed that many of these persons should not have been cleared.

Hickenlooper yesterday said the AEC has been guilty of "avoidance of the law" in granting emergency clearances to individuals to do atomic work without full FBI investigations.

Joseph Volpe, jr., commission general counsel, said the commission decided in 1947 that it had the power to grant such clearances—without a prior FBI investigation—in cases where an emergency had arisen. He said Attorney General Tom C. Clark agreed.

Volpe said he had discussed the problem with Hickenlooper, then chairman of the congressional committee, and came away with the impression that he agreed as "no serious question was raised."

Hickenlooper retorted that his conversation dealt with "genuine emergencies," and not to a "month-by-month pattern" of such clearances averaging 118 to 180 a month.

In other testimony yesterday, Dr. Shields Warren, director of the commission's division of biology and medicine, said that continuing study of the effects of atom bombing at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, showed no evidence of increased disease among humans.

He also said that no delayed effects have been found among those exposed to the bomb explosions.

In a telegram to the committee, W. W. Waymack, a former commission member, praised the commission's work under Lilienthal as resulting in a "very substantial improvement" of the Nation's atomic position.

He said he wanted the "privilege" of sharing the responsibility—whether it was praise or blame—for the commission's accomplishments while he was a member. Before being named to the commission, Waymack was editor of the Des Moines (Iowa) Register and Tribune.

United Auto Workers Ask CIO To Oust Unions Ruled by Reds

Milwaukee, July 11 (AP).—Spearheading labor's drive against Communists, the United Auto Workers today asked the parent CIO to oust all its affiliates dominated by party members.

President Walter Reuther said the anti-Communist action, taken at his Union's 12th convention, is "the strongest ever adopted by a CIO Union.' The vote was almost unanimous among the 2400 delegates.

The resolution asked the National CIO convention at Cleveland to revoke the charters of all affiliates dominated by Reds, claiming such unions had failed to organize workers within their jurisdiction.

Organizing committees should be set up, too, said the resolution, to bring into the CIO fold the workers it said were betrayed by Communist party-line leadership.

Eleven CIO unions have been fisted by national officers as under Red domination. Three of them—the United Office and Professional Workers, the United Public Workers and the Food and Tobacco Workers—were singled out by Reuther as the ones which had fallen down most in organizing.

Passage of the measure was a major triumph for Reuther. The red-haired UAW chieftain urged a similar drive at last year's CIO convention, but it did not materialize.

The convention earlier took unanimous action demanding immediate FBI intervention in the unsolved attempts on the lives of Reuther and his brother, Victor, the union's education director.

The delegates cheered when Victor, his right eye socket covered by a patch and his right arm in a sling, appeared as a surprise speaker. It was his first official appearance since he was wounded by a shotgun blast May 25.

Victor, pale and drawn, spoke only briefly. He paused when leaving to clasp left hands with Walter, whose right arm also was shattered by a gun blast in April, 1948.

The convention was stirred briefly when word circulated that Matt Evans, one of Walter's armed guards, hadn't been heard from for 36 hours. Later he was reported at his Detroit home. Contacted there, he said, "It's all a misunderstanding." He added he had told UAW aides of his plans but they apparently failed to notify Reuther.

ment should take next, he "may" make one. However, he declined to say what it would be.

The President can declare the strike, if it occurs, a "national emergency" and invoke the Taft-Hartley Act's emergency procedures. Under these, he can appoint a presidential board to study the issues, and he can seek a Federal Court injunction which would delay the strike for 80 days. He has invoked these procedures seven times in the past.

"I'm not hazarding any guess as to whether the President will determine it is a national emergency or not," Mr. Ching said.

Seven companies were represented at the conference: United States Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Jones and Laughlin, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Wheeling Steel and National Steel.

John A. Stephens, vice-president of U. S. Steel, told reporters the mediation attempt failed because the union insisted on pressing its demand for $150-a-month pensions—a demand which the corporation insists is not within the scope of the wage reopening. The union says pensions in substance involve wages and should be discussed.

The union also has asked for an insurance program and a wage increase.

Steel Production To Rise to 77.8%

New York, July 11 (AP).—Steel production reversed the field this week, after 12 straight weeks of declines, to show an increase over the previous week, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

Output was estimated at 1,434,300 net tons of steel ingots, compared with 1,128,200 tons in the previous holiday-shortened week. Production will be at 77.8 per cent of rated capacity this week, an increase of 16.6 points, or 27.1 per cent, over the holiday week's 61.2 per cent rate.

Production, however, had not climbed back to the 79.9 per cent of capacity and 1,473,000 tons shown two weeks ago before the Fourth of July caused several furnaces to shut down.

Truman Rebuffed On Canfil, Switzer

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Two of President Truman's nominations met with Senatorial rebuffs yesterday

The President withdrew the nomination of his old and close friend, Fred A. (Bull) Canfil for reappointment as United States marshal at Kansas City, Mo.

Meanwhile it developed that the Senate Judiciary Committee has bottled up the nomination of Carroll O. Switzer, Des Moines lawyer, to whom Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Ia.) has raised serious objections.

The withdrawal of the Canfil nomination touched off an angry outburst in the Senate.

Democratic leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) accused the Senate Judiciary Committee of being discourteous and disrespectful to the President by failing to act on the nomination.

Lucas said Canfil was nominated to serve in the western Missouri, area, Mr. Truman's home district. He contended it was "wrong not to consider this nomination above all others."

Long a supporter of President Truman in his campaigns in Missouri, one-time Truman secretary, and a former investigator for the National Defense Investigating Committee, Canfil traveled with Mr. Truman to the "Big Three" conference at Potsdam in 1945.

Canfil figured in a sharp controversy last year over whether or not he had told a Springfield, Mo., newspaper photographer "The Constitution be damned."

Canfil denied having said anything of the sort.

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), chairman of the Judiciary Committee, replied he thought it best to delay action on the nomination pending an investigation rather than have it defeated.

"That's exactly what we were up against," McCarran said.

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) told the Senate he had insisted upon an investigation of the nomination because of the report of Canfil's remarks.

Donnell said that without further study he couldn't be sure but he believed that under the law Canfil could continue drawing his pay as United States Marshal provided no other appointment is made.

At Kansas City, Canfil appeared surprised when told his nomination had been withdrawn.

"This is absolutely out of a clear sky to me," Canfil told the Associated Press. "Of course, in a matter of this type I rely on the President's judgment."

Eben Ayers, assistant White House press secretary, was asked why the President withdrew Canfil's nomination.

"The nomination has been up since January, it hasn't been acted on and apparently won't be acted on, so the President withdrew it," Ayers said.

The Switzer judgeship nomination appears stymied. McCarran whose Judiciary Committee, would have to start the machinery for Senate confirmation, said he has postponed hearings indefinitely.

Other Senators have let it be known that it has been suggested to the President that this appointment be allowed to lapse without action or be withdrawn.

Gillette has protested that he was not consulted before the nomination of Switzer, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor in the last election. Such notice is customary.

Later Gillette announced he would battle Senate confirmation because of this and because he sponsored two other attorneys for the judgeship.

Judge Tells Of 'Stuffing'

convert the present trial into the trial of two other charges, the judge held. He said it would put in issue two other charges not contained in the indictment with which the defendant is not "here charged" but on which he would be expected to make a defense.

No action was brought against Prichard in connection with the other two cases.

The Government rested its case late today. The defense will begin its testimony Tuesday.

Judge Ardery said Prichard admitted to him a part in the fraud when he came to the judge seeking advice in the matter.

After that testimony, most spectacular in the week-old trial to date, most of the day was spent in a repetitious cross-examination of a Government handwriting expert who told the jury last week that a large number of the ballots were forged by Funk.

Defense attorneys pointed up various pecularities and variations in the handwriting samples. The answer of the expert, Walter G. Blackburn, usually was that, while the variations did appear, when put together with other findings, they always formed a definite pattern.

Judge Ardery was excused without any cross-examination.

His testimony was brief but pointed. He said Prichard came to him for advice the night of November 7, 1948. the evening before he instructed a Circuit Court grand jury to investigate the election irregularities.

"Mr. Prichard told me that he and two other young men prepared these ballots here in issue and put them in the ballot boxes before the election," he told the jury.

The witness did not identify the others by name.

"I remember few details," the judge continued. "He gave me no details as to the time and place of this happening.

"He gave me two details in regard to it. He said one of the young men wrote the names of the election officers on the ballots and that he stamped the ballot that scratched Senator Chapman."

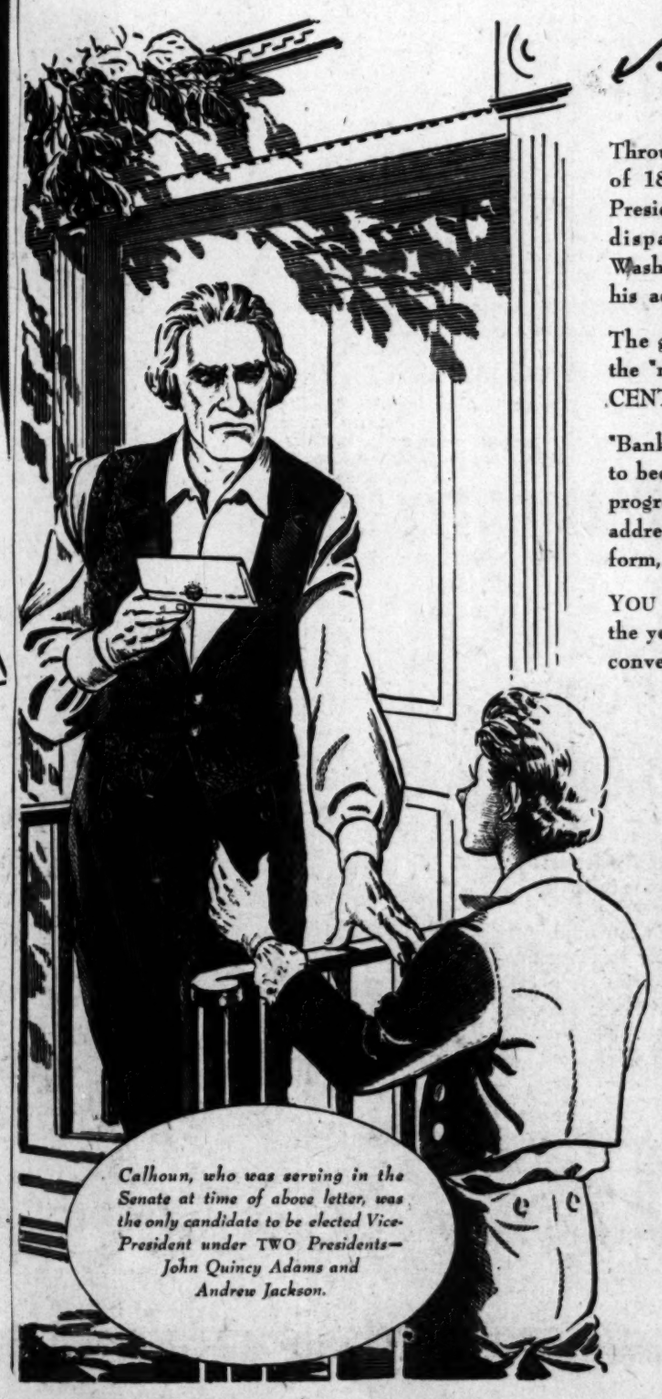
J. C. Calhoun



Calhoun, who was serving in the Senate at time of above letter, was the only candidate to be elected Vice-President under TWO Presidents—John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson.

Through the heat of a Washington summer in July of 1846, JOHN C. CALHOUN, former Vice-President, Secretary of State and Secretary of War, dispatched the above communication to the Washington City Post Office enclosing a check for his account with Messrs. Corcoran & Riggs' Bank.

The great South Carolinian was thus employing the "mail-deposit" methods of MORE THAN A CENTURY ago.

"Banking by Mail" has advanced through the years to become a regular feature of the services of every progressive bank. Printed deposit slips and self-addressed envelopes, combined into one convenient form, may now be dropped into the nearest mailbox.

YOU can save steps this summer (and throughout the year) by inquiring about the RIGGS mail-deposit conveniences.

Scientist and Wife Rescued in Arctic

Fairbanks, Alaska, July 11 (AP).—With a bottleful of beetles, Dr. Melville T. Cook, 79-year-old Louisiana State botany professor, stepped from a rescue plane last night with his wife and Pilot Bill Currington.

The three, object of a week-long search by 30 military and civilian planes, were snatched by a helicopter from the side of a 3200-foot mountain 50 miles north of the Arctic Circle and 50 miles north of Fort Yukon. Their single-engined Cessna crash-landed when Currington got lost and the gas ran low.

Dr. Cook, and Mrs. Cook, who also is near 80, and Currington were emphatic in declaring they have had their fill of eggs, and Alaska mosquitoes, the world's hungriest.

They had a cargo of 90 dozen eggs aboard—consigned to a roadhouse—when the plane put down. Only a few eggs were cracked.

"We ate them raw, we ate them cooked," said Dr. Cook.

To foil the mosquitoes, the castaways slept inside the plane, and sealed the cracks with adhesive tape to keep the insects out. They sent up daily smoke signals.

They were sighted yesterday by a Tenth Rescue Squadron B-17 piloted by Capt. C. E. Hale. It was the first plane they had seen, although aircraft have bracketed 400,000 square miles in the search.

Despite the peril of their situation, Dr. Cook spent his days catching insects peculiar to the Artic and gathering specimens of grass, flowers and fungus. The first thing he did on arrival here was to wave a bottle of beetles.

"Look," he said, "what I got for the museum at Lousiana State University."

Mrs. Cook said they were unworried until after the fourth day.

"Then," she said, "we began to fear that nobody would look for us so far north."

The Cooks will complete their vacation tour of Alaska.

Judge Intimates Revival of Crime News 'Gag'

Baltimore, July 11 (AP).—There is a hint Baltimore's judges may rephrase and impose again their outlawed rule which restricts crime news.

Chief Judge W. Conwell Smith of the Baltimore supreme bench said today:

"A simplification of the rule regarding publications has been in contemplation for some time and its consideration has been deferred because of the pendency of the contempt litigation.

"It is probable that the subject will be taken up when the supreme bench meets in the fall."

Maryland's Court of Appeals recently invalidated a section of the unique rule which prohibited publication of certain news about crime cases before they came to trial.

The court thereby exonerated four radio stations and a commentator who had been convicted of contempt for violating the rule.

The ten-year-old news code, known as rule 904, prohibits police officers, prosecutors, and defense attorneys from disclosing information about a pending criminal case.

The rule had an additional section which prohibited the publication of any of this information.

20 cents.

My investigations have convinced me you can't even win by playing favorites to show over an extended period of time. You won't lose much, but you will lose!

It's generally overlooked that you can't beat the races legally or illegally, because your winnings—if any—are watered down considerably by all sorts of "deductions." The total deduction—for State taxes and the track operators—is never less than 10 per cent and often goes as high as 15 per cent.

The money to be returned to the winning bettors is reduced also by "breakage"—money which represents the difference between the mathematically computed payoff price and the rounded-off figure posted on the payoff boards. If the mathematical payoff to each ticket is $10.49, the track rounds this figure to $10.40.

If there are five horses in a race, does each horse have an equal chance of winning?

If this were true, then it would be simple to figure probabilities. But it isn't! Many things influence the result of a race.

There are the jockeys to be considered, the kind of food given the horses before the race, the training the horses received, the nature of the track, the physical condition of the horses, the age of the horses, the length of the race, the weight to be carried, the type of horseshoes, and a score of other factors.

Citation has run against fields of 8 and 10 horses, but always has been quoted at odds of less than even money. The odds against the other horses have been as high as 100 to 1.

We can figure probalities in dice, coins, cards and other games because the basic factors and conditions are essentially the same for successive events or trials. This isn't possible with horse racing, since each race has a different set of conditions or factors.

There is a surprisingly large number of people who have developed what they consider perfect systems for beating the races—but I have yet to find one that is infallible.

Especially preposterous are the hundreds of betting systems sold to the gambling public through deceptive advertising.

The people who promote such systems know they are worthless. If they believed otherwise, they certainly wouldn't sell their knowledge.

Here are a few of the more widely touted systems:

1. Betting on the favorite to win is a system offering high percentage of winners—somewhere between 30 and 40 per cent. However, the average return on a successful favorite is less than $5 for a $2 wager. Even at a continued payoff of $5 for $2, you would have to score in 40 per cent of the races to come out ahead over a period of time.

2. Betting on the jockey rather than the horse is popular because some of the better riders win from 20 to 25 per cent of their races. But at the rate of 20 per cent winners, the payoff price would have to average $10 to let you break even. Horses ridden by the better jockeys—Eddie Arcaro, Ted Atkinson, Bobby Permane, Johnny Longden—rarely pay that much when they win.

3. Betting on horses that have won half their races is a fallacious system. There are not many such horses and when they race and win, the payoff price averages less than $4—the dividing line between winning and losing money on this system.

4. Betting on horses that have won a third of their races isn't very fruitful either, since the payoff averages less than $6—the line of demarcation between profit and loss.

5. Betting on horses that have won a third of their races and have been "in the money" in half their races doesn't get very far. An eight-week study of this system showed that several high-priced winners were included among the low-priced winners, but the final result was a loss of $108 on $2 wagers. This system is futile because the average payoff price is less than $5.

6. Betting on a horse that won the previous time it ran is a system that inevitably fails because few horses repeat their success. Inconsistency among most horses causes a large percentage of losses.

7. Betting on the selections of certain newspaper handicappers is doomed because the latter rarely pick more than 30 per cent of the winners. It has been shown that the losses for the year on a $2 flat bet for each handicapper often go above $1000.

And now for the touting racket. Touts use varied techniques for luring the gullible—newspaper advertisements, letters, telephone calls, telegrams, etc.

Some contend they know that this or that race is fixed. Some say they have knowledge of a scheme to dope a particular horse to make him run faster. Some say they have "inside" information from a trainer or stable hand.

A typical tout convinces eight different people in eight different places that he knows that a certain race involving eight horses is fixed. Contacting each player separately, he tells the first to bet on horse No. 1, the second to bet on horse No. 2, etc.

He collects in advance a fee of $10 from each player or he makes an arrangement whereby he gets 25 or 50 per cent of the winnings of a $100 wager.

Although touting is illegal, it has almost come to be accepted as a normal part of racing practice.

Some turf writers who know racing have published accurate information and some common-sense rules about horses and horse playing, but let me emphasize that no system of betting on horses will show a profit over a considerable period of time.

Attention should be given to daily-double bets (wagers on which horses will win both the first and second races). These invariably result in losses.

The highest daily double payoff was $10,772.40 for $2 at Washington Park, Chicago, on August 14, 1939. However, on November 12, 1948, the double at Bowie paid only $7.80 for $2. The all-time double low is believed to have been the $6.90 paid on a $2 ticket at Stamford Park on August 26, 1940.

The world's record payoff on a single winning horse was 3409 to 1, paid by Cooley at Haddock Park, England, on December 5, 1929. The wife of a Liverpool physician collected $1705 on a 50-cent wager.

The highest American price paid on a winner was at Latonia, Ky., on June 17, 1912, when Wishing Ring returned $1885.50 for $2.

Probably the shortest odds on record are 1 to 100, offered three times against Man o' War. He won all three races.

Low odds of this kind are not possible today because race tracks are required by law to return at least 5 or 10 per cent on all wagers, even if the track must pay out of its own pocket.

Such an occurrence is called a "minus pool" and happens when there is heavy wagering on one horse. Citation has caused a number of minus pools in recent years.

Even so, the odds against consistent winning of wagers are enormous. You can't win if wagering is pursued as a steady diet.

In fact, Elbert Hubbard once said, "The only man who makes money following the races is the one who does so with a broom and shovel."

Jury Award In Death Is Affirmed

A person caught in the path of a speeding train is not required to use the best possible judgment in order to escape the charge of contributory negligence, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals pointed out yesterday.

The court's ruling, in a 2-1 opinion, affirmed an award of $7500 granted by a District court jury to Mrs. Rosa Postom, 217 10th st. se., as administratrix of the estate of Mrs. Isabell Postom. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was defendant in the suit.

Killed at Crossing

Mrs. Isabell Postom was killed in December, 1945, when the car in which she was a passenger was struck by a train when it became fixed in a rut while crossing the Baltimore and Ohio tracks at Mill Race Crossing in Bladensburg, Md.

Two other occupants of the car, Osborne McKinney, 34, of 622 3d st. ne., the driver, and Ordelia Lanford, Mrs. Postom's sister, leaped from the car, as the train approached and escaped injury.

The majority opinion was written by District Judge Alexander Holtzoff sitting in the appellate court by designation.

May Have Been Petrified

Holtzoff wrote: "The law is clear that in a moment of unexpected emergency and imminent danger a person is not held to the use of the best possible judgment or a high degree of prudence . . . what actually happened to the deceased immediately before the crash is unknown . . . She may have been petrified with fear . . ."

The opinion was concurred in by Judge Henry W. Edgerton.

Judge Wilbur K. Miller, dissenting, said: "It is plain that McKinney's negligence was the sole cause of the accident. His testimony concerning the condition and the construction of the crossing was grossly false and his theory of how the accident happened was contrary to common experience. In my view, the jury's verdict is a completely unwarranted taking of the railroad company's money."

Russian Denied Stay in U. S.

A Russian alien, held at Ellis Island for deportation, lost a fight before the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday for admission to the country.

He is Leon Kaminer, who was refused entry and ordered deported because, officials said, he is not considered a proper security risk.

They said he was excluded under a Presidential proclamation permitting and directing such exclusions and deportations. This was issued under an empowering act passed by Congress on June 21, 1941. The order excluding him asserted that to admit him would be prejudicial to the best interests of the Nation.

He brought suit before District Court here for a declaratory judgment holding the act of Congress and the Presidential proclamation unconstitutional. He also asked as part of the judgment that the exclusion and deportation orders be set aside and that he be admitted.

A statutory three-judge panel in District Court upheld the constitutionality of the authority for Kaminer's exclusion and deportation. A single judge later dismissed his suit. The appeal decided yesterday was from those orders.

The Court of Appeals held that the declaratory judgment Kaminer sought was in effect a substitute for a writ of habeas corpus. It held further that such substitution is not legal and that suit for a writ of habeas corpus must be brought in the Southern District of New York, which embraces the place he is held.

Authorities said Kaminer visited a number of other countries before arriving and attempting to enter here.

Chambliss, 45-year-old city garage employe. Chambliss was charged with flogging while masked in the case of Bill Hamilton, a coal miner.

Chambliss denied he had ever been a Klansman as did the two men who were next taken into custody—Mel Fields, 41-year-old boiler fireman, and William Allen Byrd, 28, a boilermaker.

Fields was indicted for flogging while masked in the Hamilton case and Byrd for the flogging of Billy Stovall, 31-year-old Navy veteran who bought a gun after the hoodlums whipped him.

Five men were ordered held without bond for first degree burglary in an incident involving Mrs. Hugh McDanal, 42-year-old grandmother who said 100 men broke into her home accused her of "dancing in the nude," and struck her.

Burglars Get $700 in Loot

Burglars, busy in Washington over the weekend, obtained loot totalling between $700 and $900, according to reports to police yesterday.

Richard (Tex) Baker, proprietor of Tex's Grill, 1361 H st. ne., damaged by a $17,000 fire last week, said burglars broke through a nailed-up back-door and took about $70 worth of stock.

Their loot, Baker reported, included boxes of lump sugar, coffee, cans of peanut oil, cases of bottled honey, four electric fans, a small radio, and change from a cigaret machine. Baker was released last Friday by United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence, on $5000 bond on two charges of arson filed in connection with the fire.

Muscular marauders entered the office of the Life & Casualty Insurance Co. of Tennessee over the weekend, according to a report by M. B. Holleman, manager. They apparently walked down from the fifth floor, in the building at 742 9th st. nw., carrying a 150-pound safe and made away with it. Holleman said it contained from $300 to $500 in cash.

At the Terminal Used Car Lot, 300 Florida ave. ne., burglars broke into the office, got $210 in cash and a car radio, early yesterday, according to Alexander Swaine, coowner.

British Comment

There is a tendency among some of the Left-Wing partisans to say that the British crisis is an unnecessary crisis that need never have happened if it were not for the chronic and incorrigible instability of American capitalism. This is an attempt to establish an excuse. It is a smoke screen of poison gas. It is not true that the American economy is slumping. The level both of general demand and of economic activity in America is still a long way above any definition of normal that the world has ever before known, and if British socialism cannot adjust itself to as minor a quaver as this, then it is too delicate for the real world. Labor members of Parliament would do well to remember that their government would have been out of office in collapse and chaos years ago if American capitalism had not been willing to subsidize it. The next few months will be difficult enough in any event. To start up a chorus of anti-Americanism will make the necessary hardships no easier to bear, while removing the chief reason for hoping that they will not have to be borne forever. And it will also bring crashing down the painfully built edifice of political security in the West. Nobody could at this juncture do his country a worse disservice than to indulge in this conspiracy of envy and malice.

The (London) Economist, July 9, 1949.

Hawaii Solution

It is hard to have much patience with President Truman's contention that he is powerless to act in the Hawaiian shipping strike. Nevertheless, whether or not he actually has the power now to intervene, apparently he is not going to do anything about the paralysis in Hawaii. That is the essential reason calling for immediate passage of the Knowland-Farrington bill which has been introduced in both houses of Congress. This bill would specifically authorize Mr. Truman to appoint a presidential board of inquiry as a means of bringing agreement in the tie-up that has isolated Hawaii since May 1.

Actually, the board of inquiry probably can do little that has not already been done by the Territorial Fact-Finding Board. Hawaiian stevedoring companies reluctantly accepted the recommendation of that board for a 14-cent hourly wage increase, but the report was rejected by the International Longshoremen's Union, which held out for arbitration. Now the ILWU has announced that it will abide by the findings of a presidential board of inquiry, but the employers are balking on the contention that this will amount to arbitration.

Such heming and hawing amounts to a prima donna act with tragic overtones for the people of Hawaii. There is no reason to believe that a presidential board would be unfair, or, indeed, that its findings would be materially different from those of the territorial board. The important thing is to end the jockeying for position and get on with the settlement machinery. Surely it should not require a week of hearings before action can be taken on this simple bill to relieve the emergency.

Strategic Buying

There is something to be said for the proposal to speed up purchases of critical materials for stockpiling as a palliative during Britain's financial crisis. Such purchases would be a temporary help and nothing more, for, although they would serve to make more dollars available now, they would not solve Britain's fundamental difficulty. However, if metals and other scarce items are to be bought anyhow for the Nation's defense stockpile, then it should be possible to concentrate them where they will do the most good.

During 1948 the United States bought some 194 million dollars' worth of rubber and 71 million dollars' worth of tin from British areas, though not all of this buying was for stockpiling. These materials are still needed in stockpiles, and doubtless the list could be expanded. The Munitions Board shortly will have available some 500 million dollars for cash stockpiling purchases as well as approximately 300 million more in contractual authority. There is no limitation on where or when this money must be spent, provided that it contributes to the over-all defense.

A danger does arise, however, that the purpose of the stockpiling program might be perverted by mixing it with an effort either to aid needy countries or to provide price supports. This danger must be considered and guarded against in any new buying scheme having assistance to dollar-short areas as a secondary object. Buying for stockpiling is a delicate business. The Munitions Board encountered a lot of criticism when it had to do its buying in a sellers' market. It insisted on domestic producers setting aside a portion of their production when they could not fill all demands. This competition made for boosted prices. For instance, copper, lead and zinc were bought at peak prices of 23½, 21½ and 17½ cents a pound, respectively—fancy prices as the markets now stand. Now that a buyers' market has arrived, criticism from consumers anxious to see prices deflated might easily be invited.

Nevertheless there is no reason why purchasing agencies should not consult with the State Department to integrate buying with the aims of foreign policy; and no reason, furthermore, for hesitation in some stepping up of stockpiling.

Truman's Prescription

In his midyear economic report to Congress President Truman admits that the country is in the throes of a business recession that makes his anti-inflation program obsolete. Having belatedly recognized the economic facts of life, he accordingly emphasizes the present need for business stimuli instead of restrictive controls. Well and good, though there will be a difference of opinion as to whether the particular stimuli he recommends will really stimulate.

Withdrawal of the President's earlier demands for tax increases was inevitable. In view of the changed outlook, it was evident some time ago that they were totally out of place, and Congress would certainly have rejected them. Sound arguments can be advanced, too, in support of the recommendation to eliminate taxes on transportation of goods, and to liberalize the loss carry-over provisions of the corporate income tax laws. These changes, limited though they are, would provide some spur to business activity without any great loss of revenue. However, when the President declares that any cut in essential budget expenditures (meaning outlays that he himself considers essential) would drag down the whole economy, he is no longer on firm ground. On top of the withdrawal of demands for new taxes needed to balance the budget, this proposition commits him to advocacy of deficit financing as a method of overcoming the downturn in economic activity.

We wonder whether Government spending as a panacea accords with the economic counsel of Dr. Nourse. In his recent testimony in public, at any rate, Dr. Nourse seems to have been sympathetic to the thesis that Government economy is the best impetus during the present period of readjustment—that the main object should be to encourage business incentive. Certainly he cannot agree with the presidential argument in favor of deficit financing. Government spending is necessary, Mr. Truman says, in order to enlarge consumer purchasing power—as if there has been a curtailment of it.

The fact is, as Mr. Truman inconsistently notes, that the personal incomes of consumers after taxes have decreased only 1 per cent since the last half of 1948 while real consumer income has risen slightly owing to interim declines in prices. Here is clear evidence that consumer purchasing power does not need bolstering. Nor, for that matter, does consumer spending need stimulation. What is needed, rather, is a revival of business and banker enterprise. A Government spending program that will add to the size of an already huge Federal debt and tend to shake confidence in the credit standing of the Government is not the way to provide investment initiative. It is the way, on the contrary, to retard it. We do not believe that Congress, or for that matter the American people, can be converted to a belief in deficit financing as an easy road to future prosperity and full employment.

We agree that it is desirable, even urgent, for the Government to make systematic studies of investment and developmental needs and market opportunities both in domestic and foreign fields. There is also need for a reform of procurement and construction activities with a view to improved selection and timing of antislump public projects, as the President requests. Preparedness is necessary in the event that the recession turns into a slump, which, emphatically, far from describes the present situation that the President seeks to correct.

Most of Mr. Truman's other specific recommendations for counteracting recession are a repetition of demands made when he was still worrying about inflation, such as increasing the minimum wage to 75 cents an hour, broadening and liberalizing social insurance payments, and restoring the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. To sum up: the President has no startling plans to offer for arresting the business decline. And what is good about them is marred by his wholehearted acceptance of the pernicious doctrine that budget balancing is neither attainable nor desirable during a period which is still to be interpreted by the term used by Dr. Nourse as "disinflation," or a transition between a sellers' and a buyers' market.

Uruguayan Beef

The bond of understanding that for many years has linked this country with freedom-loving and progressive Uruguay is now threatened by an unfortunate incident which combines touchiness on the one side with ineptness on the other. Uruguay is incensed, and newspapers usually friendly to the United States have denounced this country, because of an Army beef contract on which the Uruguayans feel they were double-crossed.

As we understand the facts, they are these: On June 16 the Army announced that it would buy $4,832,000 worth of meat in South America for overseas troops. When bids were opened at the Army Market Center in Chicago on June 24, a Uruguayan firm was found to be the low bidder. Uruguayan officials assumed from this that Uruguay had won the contract and sent word to Montevideo accordingly. Inasmuch as Uruguay usually had bid on commercial rather than high quality beef, however, the Army inquired whether the firm was prepared to furnish the necessary quantity of high-grade meat. Subsequently, on June 27, the firm withdrew its bid for the purpose of reconsidering the situation. The Army then called for new bids to be submitted by June 28—this because funds had to be obligated by June 30. The Uruguayan firm submitted a new bid, but an Argentine company undercut it and was awarded the contract.

It is possible to understand the concern in Montevideo over what on the surface appeared to be favoritism toward Argentina and a slap at a country which had cooperated with the United States against Peron's aggression. Actually the fault seems to lie both with the overeager Uruguayan officials who jumped the gun in concluding they had won the contract and with the Army for not making the situation clear. Regardless of the reason, the breach is a serious one, and, though the State Department has attempted to explain matters, passions once aroused are not easily soothed. This is no time for stiff-neckedness. Even though technically an apology may not be called for, certainly in the interest of continued friendship the State Department would have nothing to lose by issuing a public note of regret detailing the exact circumstances.

Judicial Impartiality

Judge Samuel H. Kaufman's conduct of the Hiss trial, resulting as it did in a hung jury, has evoked, inevitably, some bitter criticism. It is scarcely surprising that this criticism has come most bitterly from the most inappropriate of sources—from members of the House Committee on Un-American Activities who had a strong and obvious interest in a conviction of Alger Hiss. Their suggestion that the judge's conduct be made a subject of investigation is as lacking in propriety as in all sense of proportion respecting the committee's authority and jurisdiction.

One need not be a defender of Judge Kaufman's conduct to recognize that investigation of it by the Committee on Un-American Activities would be egregiously improper. The Hiss case is to be tried again. A congressional summoning of Judge Kaufman would amount to a kind of formal notice to any judge conducting the trial in future that he is liable to be hauled before the Un-American Activities Committee unless he runs the procedure exactly as its members see fit. As the president of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, observed, "That course would be the end of the independence of the judiciary in this country." The Constitution provides an explicit procedure for dealing with Federal judges guilty of improper conduct. That procedure is impeachment.

Judge Kaufman faced some exceedingly difficult decisions in the Hiss trial. There is room for difference of opinion as to his wisdom in every instance. But there is no evidence to suggest that he was deficient in integrity. It is an essential part of a judge's job to see that a defendant on trial before him receives every protection to which he is entitled under the law. Judge Kaufman did this job faithfully in respect of Alger Hiss. Those now censuring him appear to think that he should have dealt with the defendant as they dealt with him when he appeared before their committee last year.

Planning Commission

The elevation of Dean William W. Wurster to the chairmanship of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission augurs a needed revitalization of that body. As one of its public members during the past year, Dean Wurster supported the movement within the commission which led to deletion of designations as to color in respect of the District's playgrounds areas. The action removed the ground on which the local Board of Recreation claimed that it was required to operate playgrounds on a basis of racial segregation. His leadership can be counted on to take the commission in the direction of democratic ideals.

It can be counted on also to bring to the tasks of the commission the highest level of professional competence. Dean Wurster is a noted architect and city planner, serving at present as head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's school of architecture and planning. He will certainly find his hand strengthened by the appointment of Hilyard R. Robinson, a distinguished local architect, as a commission member to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d. The President merits congratulations on this choice. It will give representation to the District's Negro population, long warranted by its strong interest in slum clearance. It is to be hoped that the commission will be able to obtain the enlarged budget (it functions now on an appropriation of only $84,700) which Dean Wurster requested and which it needs to carry forward its exceedingly important work in the Capital City of the country.

"Chiang In Formosa"

"Your July 9 editorial, "Chiang in Formosa," expresses the belief that the so-called "Congressional policy" of aiding Chiang, after rapprochement with the Communists, as advocated by Secretary Marshall, has proven abortive, "has put the Americans at a disadvantage in dealing with the victorious Communists" and "is encouraging other nationals to try to steal a march on Americans, and it has armed the Communists and alienated the Chinese people."

There can be no "Congressional policy" in our foreign affairs. Under the Constitution the President, and only the President, has the responsibility for conducting our foreign affairs and making foreign policy. To say that "President and State Department were both against the aid policy, but had to carry out the intervention that Congress authorized" is, in my opinion, merely dragging a "red herring" across the vacillating trail of those really responsible. Had the President followed the suggestions of Congress promptly, there might have been a different outcome.

As for your conclusion that Formosa be declared a Japanese possession, pending the peace treaty with Japan, with this I, naturally, heartily agree, although I am not sure that it would "pull the rug" out from under Chiang Kai-shek. The generalissimo has been standing on the bare floor for lo! these many months.

Gen. Claire L. Chennault in his article, "Last Call for China" in the July 11 issue of Life comes as near outlining, in my opinion, a sane policy in relation to China, as any so far advanced. Ever since the coming of the foreigner, in the early sixteenth century, China has been nothing more than a loose federation of warlords. Some, like Chiang, have controlled more space than others, but none has dominated all the Chinese people at any one time.

It is fatuous, therefore, to believe that the Communists will perform such a miracle. Three strong men in areas well defended by nature, as Chennault points out, gainsay it. These three strong men, implacable foes of the Communists, need guns, ammunition and supplies. These materials are present in vast stockpiles left over from the war in the Philippines and our Pacific bases.

If we wait much longer "for the dust to settle" it will settle all over Asia and eventually on us. Let us deal with the "victorious Communists" in China as we dealt with them in Greece. Another policy will lead only to disaster for Asia and eventually for the world. F. R. E.

Barden Bill

The Rev. Mr. Clark, in his letter of July 7, wishes to limit public benefits to those children who attend the schools "promoted and supported by the Government." He maintains that otherwise the Government would be giving "tax money for sectarian religious purposes."

But, may I ask Mr. Clark, which does he consider more definitely giving tax money for "sectarian religious purposes": Paying the salary of a Protestant, Catholic or Jewish chaplain to devote full time to teaching his religious faith in the armed forces, or providing free rides on a bus, free health service, and cheap lunches to children attending religious schools where at least 85 to 90 per cent of the time is spent in teaching nonsectarian, nonreligious subjects?

Is it just, moreover, to penalize a minority group of taxpayers by denying their children certain health and educational facilities unless they forgo their American right to send children to the school of their choice? Doesn't it just make sense for taxpayers to expect to share themselves in benefits of their own tax money?

Accident Pictures

Eames MacVeagh's what-you-don't-know-won't-hurt-you attitude, as expressed in your July 10 issue on the subject of printing accident photographs, is unfortunate. In his implied desire to preclude the possibility of regurgitating at "the start of a bright new day at breakfast time," he urges that The Washington Post refrain from using accident pictures.

Has he forgotten the tens of thousands of deaths, injuries, ruined lives and incalculable misery that are a result of highway accidents? Surely he cannot believe that a conscious effort to minimize this national shame will help the situation.

Words alone are hardly sufficent to describe the human tragedy of the more than 300 traffic deaths experienced over the July 4 weekend. It is only with realistic pictures that the public can be made cognizant of the necessity for safe and sane highway travel.

"The Fountainhead"

The movie The Fountainhead, carries a "punch" in behalf of the "American way of life" worth experiencing. It also gives an insight into Communist means and ends that is illuminating.

Not in some time, I think, has the current "ideological" argument been confronted so openly and forcefully in a film. For this reason, especially, The Fountainhead production may be popular, for it contains a positive unqualified statement in behalf of individual liberty. After recent months of bickering and hesitancy, such a stand, and particularly when received visually as well as orally, may give readers who've been subjected to printed propaganda, real relief and pleasure.

Drunken Drivers

With many others I wonder at the leniency shown the dipsomaniacs who display an utter disregard for their own life and welfare and less for others. Recently the National Safety Council announced that such drunken-driver accidents cost an annual estimated damage of 120 million dollars.

The States and Federal Government have commissioners busily engaged trying to make the law uniform in regard to commercial law and negotiable instruments for better cooperation in that respect. Why wouldn't the same organized effort produce equally satisfactory results in criminal law? There need be no sacrifice of States' rights merely because they try to cooperate cum grano salis. Hawaii Profiteering Debunked

The Chamber of Commerce of Honolulu objects to statements made by Hetzil A. Kenton in his letter which appeared in your issue of July 2.

Far from profiting from the present shipping strike, Honolulu merchants are suffering severe losses. Questionnaires returned by about 600 local businessmen to the Chamber of Commerce showed that almost all of them had experienced decreases of 10 per cent or more in business volume since the strike began on May 1. True, potatoes sold here at 28 cents for a while—but they had to be mailed to Honolulu from the Mainland by parcel post at regular rates.

We of course cannot check Mr. Kenton's story of the pair of shoes which assertedly cost $3.85 more in Honolulu than the price charged in a San Francisco store for the same shoes. We can, however, give him a list of nationally advertised brands, including shoes and clothing, which sell here for the same price charged on the Mainland.

Partly because of the ever-present menace of shipping strikes, the cost of wholesaling here is higher than on the Mainland. Maybe that is why Mr. Kenton may have paid as much in Honolulu for a bag of sugar or a can of pineapple as he would pay in some store in continental United States. Furthermore, pineapple in cans is an item that Mainland retailers often use as a "loss leader" to attract customers. In Hawaii, where fresh pineapple is abundant and cheap, this practice is absent.

Officials of the Federal agricultural extension service laugh at Mr. Kenton's suggestion that Hawaiian-grown fresh fruits and vegetables are "going to waste" on outer islands through some mysterious arrangement promoted by shipping companies, who make more money bringing produce from the States.

The extension service has figures which show that more and more Hawaiian-grown tomatoes, celery and lettuce have been coming into Honolulu to supplant Mainland produce as growers master pest control, market forecasting and other special problems of tropical agriculture.

Mr. Kenton mentions the cost-of-living wage bonus granted Federal workers in Hawaii and wonders why many members of this community condemn the dock workers for striking for a boost of from $1.40 to $1.72 an hour. The classification study commission reported to the Territorial Legislature in February that the average stevedore's pay amounted to $276 a month. Even with the cost-of-living bonus, many Federal workers with education beyond high school and years of office or other work experience have not yet attained the pay rate already enjoyed by the Hawaiian stevedore, whose job requires no schooling.

Mr. Kenton finally charges that the persons who raised $15,000 for some full-page newspaper advertisements in an effort to end our strike have "not spent 15 cents to rid Honolulu of its disease-spreading slum districts."

The fact is that many of these same persons regularly contribute money to the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce, which has been leading the battle to get rid of our slums. Because of Mr. Kenton's apparent interest in slums, we thought we might find his name among our contributors.

We didn't.

Atomic Cooperation

THE WHISPERING and the hinting about the conduct of the Atomic Energy Commission under the chairmanship of David Lilienthal goes on, inspired by those who would discredit Lilienthal. It goes on even though the chief charges thus far publicly aired seem to have been based on trivial or non-existent grounds.

The theme of the current inspired whispering is as fantastic as anything yet put out by those who would like to see Lilienthal removed. This includes the great mystery of the missing U-235, blown up momentarily into black headlines, which proved on investigation to be a very minor business indeed.

The story is that a "courier" was en route to Britain with important atomic data supplied to the British by the Atomic Energy Commission. Word of this got to certain Senate-House Atomic Committee members who intervened to stop the courier in midflight and compel the return of the secret data.

Even though this tale is largely eye-wash, you may see it blossoming shortly in big headlines. The disturbing thing is that this latest "incident" appears to have been inspired from within the AEC itself.

A minor controversy over information which an AEC scientist was to supply to British atomic workers is apparently the only base for the new campaign. The word "courier" gives it a cloak-and-dagger sound it would not otherwise have.

WHAT MAKES this eyewash, however, is the fact that as a result of the wartime cooperation between the United States, Britain and Canada in the atomic energy project, Britain and Canada have all the essential information on atomic fission and the making of atomic bombs from fissionable material. That was made clear in the testimony of Robert F. Bacher before the Senate-House Committee investigation of Senator Hickenlooper's charges against Lilienthal.

Bacher, a former AEC member, now has an important position directing research at the California Institute of Technology. Like so much of the "defense testimony," Bacher's remarks got considerably less attention than the original reckless charges.

He described how British and Canadian scientists worked closely together during the war with the United States at the Los Alamos, N. Mex., atomic laboratory contributing ideas to the development of the bomb. They had a thorough and complete knowledge of all the bomb work. As to the present status Bacher made this significant statement:

"The British have an atomic energy project. They are setting about the production of fissionable material and have announced that they are developing and intend to produce atomic weapons. I am sure they will be successful in this undertaking. They have all of the technical know-how, all of the scientific background that is necessary for such a development and I believe it is only a question of time until they do produce bombs."

AT THE same time, under close questioning by Representative Henry Jackson of Washington, Bacher expressed his belief that the United States was way out in front of every other country on atomic development. Along with other witnesses he testified that the civilian commission has made remarkable strides in improving the type of bomb and increasing production.

Last August Chairman Lilienthal made a speech in New York that spelled out the current relationship of the AEC and its scientists with British and Canadian scientists working on atomic energy. Many days were spent in getting that declaration of policy cleared with the military, with the Senate-House Committee and with everyone remotely connected with atomic security. Lilienthal said:

"The wartime experience shared by the three governments provides a convincing demonstration of the mutual benefits to be derived from cooperative effort. Recognizing this, the three governments concerned are continuing to utilize, in an expanded way, the cooperative principle in certain limited areas in which work has been proceeding separately along the same lines in two or more of the three countries... This program of technical cooperation is carried out under the general direction of the combined policy committee which also reviews those problems of raw material supply common to the three governments."

In view of all this, it is hard to see how a scare story about secrets given away to Britain can serve even the most prejudiced and hostile of Lilienthal's foes. It would, in fact, seem to prove the desperateness of their "case," or the lack of one.

"Spur To Confidence"

Referring to your editorial of July 1, "Spur to Confidence," no one depreciates the efforts of the Federal Reserve Board in the interest of deflation. It is my humble opinion, however, some definite pledge and demonstration of a reduction in Government expenditures would have a more salutary effect than everything the board has done thus far.' R. Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Human Situation

WHY, we are bound to ask ourselves, have all our plans for world recovery fallen so far short of what they were supposed to do? Beginning with the World Bank and the Monetary Fund, which were followed by the British and the French Loans, which were followed by the Marshall Plan, we have tried to reconstruct a world economy in which our partners and friends could earn their way toward a rising standard of life. Neither they nor we have wanted to think of the American subsidy as anything but a temporary and undesirable necessity. But we have not succeeded, and once again the economic relations of Europe and North America are at a crisis.

LIPPMANN

The easy temptation is first to deny that there is a crisis, then to complain about the policies, measures, economic theories, or ideologies which we disagree with and do not like. And after that to look for trick remedies, like devaluation—or for Utopian solutions, such as the unification of a Europe which is partitioned at the Elbe River—or to fix on counsels of perfection, as for example, that the relatively backward industries of western Europe should begin quickly to compete efficiently with American industry.

BUT IF we are looking very honestly for the true answer, we must, I think, say that our error has been to underrate the tremendous consequences of the two World Wars not only on Europe but on the United States as well. So we have allowed ourselves to believe, what we so much wanted to believe, that each successive project would be the one that would soon bring the world back to what was once the normal.

Now, having made these many disappointing experiments, we shall have to admit that the old normal is not being restored, that the problem of postwar reconstruction is unique, that within the near future it may be manageable but it is not soluble, and that even with the wisest statesmanship we can hope only to assuage the difficulties, choose the lesser of the unpleasant choices open to us, leaving it to time and the much longer future to evolve a new relationship between Europe and America.

BECAUSE the crisis is being discussed in the technical terms of finance, the real issues become obscured. Yet beneath the chronic "dollar deficit" and the "inconvertibility" of the foreign currencies, there is a human situation the like of which the modern world has never seen before. The two World Wars, plus the cold war and the fear of a third war, have made western Europe dependent, as it never was before, on supplies from North America. This same warring and warlike epoch has made, indeed forced, the United States to become self-sufficient as it never was before. The crux of the problem and the heart of the crisis is that Europe must buy absolute necessities from us whereas there is almost nothing that we have to buy from Europe. Even in 1937, when the situation was more favorable than it is now, European finished manufactures imported into this country were less than 1 per cent of our consumption. There were perhaps a dozen commodities, none of them necessities, of which our imports from Europe were more than 5 per cent.

This is the hard and irreducible core of the problem of the balance of payments and its chronic dollar deficit, and of the unsuccess of the loans and of the Marshall Plan. The baffling question has been, and is, how a businesslike relation can be maintained between the Europeans who must buy from us and Americans who do not have to buy from Europe.

THE STORY has often been told of how the wars have exhausted the foreign investments, have depleted the capital, and have disrupted the markets of Europe, and of how the military partition of Europe, the cold war, and the colonial revolutions have reduced the earning power of Europe.

But an equally important chapter of the same story is not so well known. It is how the wars have affected the United States, causing by forced draught an increase not only in American productivity but also in American self-sufficiency. It is a malicious caricature of this development, often used by the Communist propaganda, to say that America has grown rich from wars. America would be much richer without them. But it is true that the wars in Europe have compelled this country to save itself and to save Europe, including Russia, by developing its own industrial and agricultural production to a point where it is largely self-sufficient with great surpluses in addition.

NOT ONLY have the wars compelled us to grow more food than we would have grown, and to manufacture more of the goods that we used to manufacture. The wars compelled us also to make many things we used to pay dollars to import, such as chemicals, dyestuffs, optical glass and rubber.

The result, as the Economic Survey of Europe points out, is that our imports in 1948 at the peak of the boom, were a very much smaller percentage of our total production than they have ever been before. Compared with 1929 our imports had increased only 5 per cent while our total production was two thirds larger. The war has made this country self-sufficient and self-contained as it never was before, and yet the American standard of life is very high.

THEREFORE, while Europe must import or suffer, there is no corresponding necessity for America to import from Europe. On the contrary there is a strong resistance to European imports which would compete with the self-sufficiency of our own postwar economy. As a result the development of world trade with Europe is a matter of enlightened self-interest for America rather than of immediate and obvious need. This makes the problem of our relations with Europe essentially political, moral, and ideological, and therefore endlessly debatable, rather than necessary, profitable, and a matter of business.

THESE considerations do not provide solution to the problem. But perhaps, as we reflect on them, they will make us tolerant, open-minded, and humble in the face of a problem which transcends our immediate capacity to solve it, which nevertheless we must live with for a long time to come.

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

Clark Hits Business Bigness, Calls Advantages Overrated

Attorney General Tom Clark yesterday called business monopoly an "economic blackjack" and urged Federal curbs on concentration of economic power.

First witness in a congressional investigation into monopoly, Clark also by implication took a dig at business "bigness."

He told a House Judiciary subcommittee that most people are the victims of three "erroneous" assumptions:

"First, it is too often assumed that competition continues to thrive as long as there are at least two or three or four in the field. In my opinion, this is not so.

"Secondly, it is assumed that the bigger the producer the better the quality of goods and the cheaper the price to the public.

"Thirdly, it is assumed that companies become big because they deserve to be big—in other words, that they outdistance their competitors because they do a better job, render greater service or furnish better goods.

"Personally, I doubt if this is often true."

Clark said further:

"The fundamental issue is whether the economy of this country is to remain free and competitive, or whether it is to be subjected to private regimentation through monopoly control."

The House committee, headed by Representative Celler (D., N. Y.), began a three weeks study of alleged monopoly with the warm support of President Truman. The President called monopoly concentration one of the most "serious problems affecting our country and its free institutions."

After hearing Clark and Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) today, the committee scheduled for next Wednesday Morris Ernst, New York attorney, and Dr. John D. Clark of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

Bigness in business is no sin, Greenewalt argued. There are many jobs, he said, that can be accomplished by small businesses, but there are others that can be done only by large companies with many resources at their disposal. He gave some du Pont examples:

1. At the request of the Government in World War II du Pont designed, constructed and operated the Hanford, Wash., plant to produce plutonium for the atomic warfare program. He said du Pont accepted this job "at the insistence of the Government" and that in the 350-million-dollar plant the company "produced plutonium in time for its effective use."

2. DuPont was one of the leaders in making this country independent of Germany in dyestuffs. They required a du Pont investment of 43 million dollars over an 18-year period before profits offset accumulated losses, he said.

3. Du Pont risked millions to develop such products as nylon, neoprene, synthetic rubber, plastics, moisture-proof cellophane, synthetic camphor, agricultural chemicals and quick-drying lacquers "that broke the manufacturing bottleneck in the auto industry."

Greenewalt promised stockholders: "Your company will fight this unjustified attack with all possible vigor."

DuPont to Fight Suit; Says It 'Imperils' U. S.

Wilmington, Del., July 11 (AP).—Du Pont's president today labeled the Government's move to break up the du Pont industrial empire a direct threat to the Nation's ability to advance in peace and survive in war.

Crawford H. Greenewalt, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., vigorously denied restraint-of-trade charges in the Government's antitrust suit filed June 30 in Federal Court in Chicago.

In a letter to stockholders he said the Government's move to force du Pont to sell all its General Motors stock and give the proceeds to stockholders as a cash dividend "is largely punitive and confiscatory."

Greenewalt added the result would be to channel "perhaps two thirds of the sum realized from the sale away from du Pont stockholders and into the hands of Government."

The Government's take through the capital gains tax on profits from the stock sale was estimated at some 350 million dollars by a company spokesman. The Government aims to divorce du Pont from

2d Housing Bill Sent to White House

The House yesterday passed and sent to the President a measure designed to maintain a high level of private home construction through expansion of the market for mortgages.

This put the second housing bill on Mr. Truman's desk, awaiting his signature.

Last week Congress passed the multi-billion dollar measure calling for construction of 810,000 publicly-owned dwelling units, with the Government obligated to pay annual rent subsidies up to 308 million dollars for low-income tenants occupying these houses.

The big bill, giving Mr. Truman the first major victory for his domestic program he calls the "Fair Deal," also provides for slum clearance in cities and for farm housing aid.

The bill passed by the House yesterday without a dissenting voice, puts emphasis on private home construction, as against public housing.

It increased from one billion dollars to $1,500,000,000 the authorization for Government purchase of mortgages from private lenders on homes costing up to $10,000.

Banking Chairman Spence (D., Ky) said, this will facilitate the construction of at least 50,000 additional privately-owned dwellings. Many GI homes are in this category.

Maryland Sells $22,500,000 Bond Issue

New York, July 11 (AP).—An underwriting group headed by Union Securities Corp. today was awarded $22,500,000 of highway construction bonds of the Maryland State Roads Commission.

The group bid 100 for a combination of coupons at a net interest cost to the State of 1.4947 per cent, and planned to reoffer the bonds at prices to yield from .70 per cent for those due August 1, 1950, to 1.65 per cent for 1964 maturities.

The State Roads Commission will use the money to pay for part of the five-year 200-million-dollar highway overhaul program authorized by the 1947 General Assembly.

A commission spokesman expressed gratification that the bid had been so low.

The only other bid was entered by a syndicate headed by Alexander Brown & Sons of Baltimore. The bid was 1.61668 per cent average annual interest.

Under the Union Securities offer, the roads commission will pay a net interest cost of $2,690,625 over the 15-year life of the bond issue.

The $22,500,000 block is the first the commission is selling from 100 million dollars authorized by the General Assembly. The long-range highway program contemplates that half the cost is to be met by current income from gasoline and registration taxes, half from bond issues.

The construction program is in full swing. Up until now the commission had been able to pay for the work done out of its current receipts.

The commission plans to sell another $2,000,000 block of bonds this year, probably after November 1. This is to finance building of a bridge across the Patuxent River between Charles and Prince Georges Counties.

W. & L. E. Would Issue $10,870,000 Bonds

By The Associated Press

The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway Co. today asked Interstate Commerce Commission authority to issue $10,870,000 in bonds.

The company said it proposes to offer for sale $6,870,000 of Series B general and refunding mortgage bonds, with the interest rate to be determined by bidding. Dated August 15, 1949, they would mature in 25 years.

The petition asked authority to nominally issue an additional four million dollars of Series C general and refunding mortgage bonds. These bonds would be held in the company's treasury for the present.

Schram Urges U. S. to Revise Tax System

Richmond, Va., July 11 (AP).—Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, today called for a "realistic revision of our entire tax structure to encourage private investment."

He proposed immediate adoption of these interim remedies while the revision is in progress:

Reduction of the capital gains tax rates from the current 25 per cent to 10 per cent and shortening of the holding period from six to three months.

Partial elimination of the double taxation on dividends by allowing taxpayers a credit of 10 per cent on all dividends received.

Schram, speaking at a luncheon meeting of the thirty-second annual convention of the National Association of Securities Administrators, praised the stand taken by President Truman in his economic report to the Nation today. However, he warned:

"The answer to the present trend is not to be found in increased lending by the Federal Government."

He told some 300 securities officials from the United States, Canada and Mexico "we are experiencing a terribly dearth of equity capital" despite the relative prosperity of the present era.

The solution, he said, lies in a revision of the tax structure to encourage an upturn in investments.

"The big companies have grown bigger, and the small companies have grown smaller" under the present tax system, he said.

The stock exchange head warned that if the present economic trend continues unchecked, the United States might find it has been following in the footsteps of England.

"We cannot bring about social reform ahead of economic reform," he said.

Schram said a current campaign by Wall Street to encourage increased investment by newcomers to the market is "bearing fruit" and will be continued.

N. Y. Central Will Use Trucks for LCL Lots

New York, July 11 (AP).—The New York Central system announced today it is inaugurating coordinated rail and truck in Ohio tomorrow for less-than-carload merchandise. The new service between 140 freight stations along the New York Central's rail lines in Ohio is designed to save one or more days in transit.

By the coordinated rail-truck service, merchandise freight is handled by rail between key cities and thence distributed to freight stations in towns along the railroad by tractor-trailers over paralleling highways. Collection of freight from the smaller stations also is made on the same motor vehicle runs.

FCC to Add 42 New Video Channels

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday announced that it proposes to add 42 new channels to the Nation's television service.

The action does not mean the end of the present "freeze" on new station applications, FCC said.

The new bands are in the "ultra high frequencies." They would be out of reach of television receivers now in the public hands, unless converters are attached to sets.

The commission said the present 12 television channels, in that section of the spectrum known as the "very high frequencies," will be continued.

Yesterday's action is the first formal step looking to the end of the freeze which the commission declared on new television station permits last October 1.

The FCC stopped processing applications or granting new station licenses at that time when it became apparent that the 12 available channels could not fill the needs of the growing new video industry.

Commission officials estimated that expansion of television broadcasting into ultra high frequencies will permit more than three times the number of broadcasting stations previously possible.

Commission action on the log-jam of television channels had been expected for some time. FCC had given the matter top priority—shelving previously announced plans to do something about radio giveaway shows until the video problem was clarified.

Under the present system, about 543 stations can be handled in 221 cities.

The new proposal makes possible an estimated 1702 stations and will make video available in some 1179 areas. If all the planned facilities are used, FCC said, there will be an ultimate total of 2245 stations in 1400 different communities.

Resumption of processing of applications, however, must await final adoption of yesterday's proposals estimated to come toward the end of this year.

The Commission also made public some slight changes in the present city-by-city allocation of the present 12 channels, and also proposed a wider mileage spacing between stations.

Dr. Edward U. Condon will make a study of color television for the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The chief of the United States Bureau of Standards was asked to make a survey by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the committee.

Johnson wants to speed up color television. He has sharply criticized FCC procrastination on this and other major communication problems. Condon's study will be made for the purpose of speeding up color television development.

Arrested as Drunk, Man Confesses to 22-yr.-Old Slaying

Harrisburg, Pa., July 11 (AP).—Chief of Police Oscar Blough said today that a man under arrest here told officers he was wanted in Virginia on a 22-year-old murder charge.

Blough said the man gave his name as John E. Pettye, alias Ernest Leonard Martin, 55, and told officers he shot and killed a neighbor, Daniel Hairston, in Martinsville, Va., in May, 1927. Blough said the man was booked here on a drunken and disorderly charge.

2 Suggestions

Producers Of Milk Offer Farm Plan

The Nation's milk farmers came up yesterday with two new ideas for a national farm plan.

The first suggestion, made to the Senate Agricultural Subcommittee by Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Association, would amend the present Agricultural Act of 1948.

The second revives memories of the hard-fought farm battle of the Harding - Coolidge - Hoover era of the 1920's. It is a modernization of the McNary-Haugen bill of those days. It would provide a "self-help way, wherein producers of the various important agricultural commodities would bear the losses in disposal of their surpluses without any cost to the Government."

Holman denounced the long-range farm program proposed last April by Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan.

It would not work if applied to dairy products, he said. One reason was that the cost of producing and distributing milk varies throughout the country from about $2.65 a hundredweight in Iowa to more than $5 in New England, New York and the Washington-Baltimore area.

Another argument was that the Brannan Plan would disturb the stability of the dairying industry.

Holman would amend the Aiken portion of the present farm law to "give dairy farmers temporary protection at least equal to that given other segments of agriculture." He proposed:

1. Mandatory support prices for milk and butterfat.
2. Inclusion of farm wage rates in the parity index.
3. Adoption of a normal supply definition, and support of milk and dairy product prices at 90 per cent of parity as long as the supply does not exceed 98 to 102 per cent of parity.
4. Diminishing support prices if the supply base is exceeded.
5. Prohibition of subsidy payments, production allotments or marketing quotas on milk or milk products.

The completely new farm proposal, Holman said, was worked out by the association's president, John Brandt of Litchfield, Minn. Holman said he was "instructed" to present it. It would provide:

1. A bipartisan board appointed by the President but responsible to Congress to administer price policies based on a modernized parity formula and to establish surplus disposal policies.
2. A gigantic operating corporation, federally capitalized, to buy designated products at the parity level.
3. Resale of such products to private and cooperative handlers at original price plus storage and a small profit; or direct sales abroad or into noncompetitive domestic channels.
4. A uniform levy when possible on the commodity unit to be collected by the first processor and paid into either the corporation or the Treasury. Losses on corporation operations to be paid from the general pool.
5. Each producer to have full liberty as to his production program.
6. Return of unprofitable submarginal land by purchase to the public domain.
7. Commodity production control to be exercised as a last resort.

Williams Hurt, May Not Play Today; Parnell, Joe DiMaggio Start for A.L.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, JULY 11.—The All-Star Game, once scorned by the major league club owners as unnecessary and an imposition on their summer business, is now being cuddled to their bosoms like pure gold.

In fact, that's what it is to an industry suddenly quite shocked to find itself over-committed to the financing of the drafted players' pension fund.

POVICH

Without the annual All-Star Game proceeds from gate receipts and radio-video, of roughly $150,000, the club owners would be taking even a worse beating than now, which is a bloody one.

In their joint meeting of the two major leagues today, the 16 owners heard a report from one Mr. Nelson, the auditor of William Wrigley's baseball and chewing firms. Mr. Nelson brought charts, graphs and everything to show the pension fund's deep dip into the red, and left the owners something like wormwood to chew on.

"At this rate, the end of the five-year pension plan in 1951 will show that it has cost us five million dollars," moaned Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club. "Something has to be revised."

THE PENSION FUND got its start in baseball's expansive era of 1946 when booming postwar gate receipts and a couple of other factors found the magnates newly solicitous of the players' welfare. Up in Boston, John Murphy, a lawyer, was making serious attempts to organize a players' union, anethema to the club owners, and down in Mexico the Pasquels were still luring contract-jumpers with promises of plenty pesos.

So the club owners, to defeat Murphy's union movement, encouraged the formation of a players' committee and promised it a voice in baseball affairs. It was thinly-masked as a company union, but with it was the prospect of a better shake for the players who didn't jump to Mexico. In their new status, the players began making demands, one of which was a pension fund, and they found a friend in Larry MacPhail, who took the lead in charting the fund. The upshot was that baseball found itself saddled with a welfare fund that is now proving so costly the owners want to scrap the agreement after the end of its five years in 1951.

THE PLAYERS ARE required to pay $250 a year into their fund from their own pockets, with each club owner matching their contribution. Last year, that arrangement cost the Washington club, $8800 and other owners paid proportionate amounts. But despite those contributions, and the takes from the last two All-Star Games, there wasn't enough money in the till to permit the fund treasuries to come close to breaking even.

All of this was on top of another agreement forced on the clubs by the players' committee, which called for the payment of $25 a week for tips and "incidental" expenses in spring training. That totted up to another $7500-a-year chunk for the individual magnates.

Under the agreement, any player who serves 10 years in the majors can draw $100 a month for life after he reaches the age of 50. After the minimum service of five years, he can draw $50 a month, with proportionate increases for six, seven, eight and nine years.

In the cases of older players who retired after only one year following the adoption of the pension plan, it was retroactive, however. Such as Joe Judge, who quit the Nats as a coach in 1947 after paying in only $250 to the fundfi become entitled eventually to $100 a month for life.

THE OWNERS ARE stuck with their pension plan, for three more years, but in 1951 it will be revised on what they call a more equitable basis. They declare now they let themselves in for too much of a rap and were over-generous to the players. They might have added, of course, that they were in a panic when they took on the burden.

Today, Fred Hutchinson of the Tigers and Dixie Walker of the Pirates, the player committee chairmen, went before the joint meeting to ask new concessions. They wanted specific guarantees for teams finishing second, third and fourth instead of risking the size of their World Series shares. They asked a league rule permitting players to take their wives and families to spring training. They want guarantees that players living out of the club's hotels will get full expense money.

They picked the wrong time to ask all of these things.

Indications are that they'll get none of 'em. "These players are into us for too much already," said one perspiring club owner.

Beau Jack 8-5 Tonight Over Giosa

Young Eddie Giosa, on his way up the lightweight ladder, and veteran Beau Jack, on his way down, meet halfway tonight in a 10-round bout at Griffith Stadium.

The rugged Jack, former champion, was beaten in his last start, by Johnny Greco, in Montreal. But he's still considered dangerous Torres, Maxie Starr, and Sammy odds.

Beau has a six-fight winning streak here, but Giosa more than matches it with victories in his last six fights everywhere.

Twenty-four-year old Giosa, a Philadelphian, is not rated as tough a puncher as his Georgia foe, but he holds victories over such prominent pugilists as Doug Ratford, Lulu Constantino, Lew Jenkins and Charlie Fusari.

About 200 Philadelphians have made reservations for the fight, and among them is Lew Tendler, lightweight champ of the early 1920's.

Despite Jack's recent loss to Greco, his handlers consider his comeback attempt still very much alive. It's only one year, exactly, since the Beau had the title knocked off his head by Ike Williams, and their Georgia boy is still only 28, they claim.

Greco was a full blown welterweight when he recently whipped Jack, and they point out that the Beau has beaten Greco twice when they were on equal weight terms.

Promoter Goldie Ahearn is predicting a gross of between $15,000 and $20,000 tonight.

Del. Horses Win Features

Delaware horses won both of Laurel Raceway's $1000 features last night, but Miss Hunter Grattan, 9-year-old black mare making her first start in at least six years stole the show by romping home first in the second race in the amazing time of 2.09.

Miss Hunter Grattan, with Joe Eyler at the reins, went to the front at the start and never was in danger. A widespread tip, she returned only $6.30, being a heavy choice with the estimated 7500 fans.

Joe Mallalieu's Josedale counsel opened the Delaware sweep of the big money events by winning the mile and a sixteenth sixth race in a handy fashion. The stretch-running son of Grattan McKinney moved to the front at the three-quarter pole and breezed in, paying his backers $5.40.

Nora Abbe, the other Delaware winner, had a tougher time, barely getting up in time to whip Prince James in a photo. My Scott, Paul Vineyard's 2-1 favorite was third.

N. L. Relies On Spahn Or Munger

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, July 11.—The National League All-Stars, equipped with a home run arsenal as protection against further humiliation by the American League, are entertaining new visions of victory tomorrow at Brooklyn's Ebbets Field.

This is the year when the National League, winless in the three All-Star games since 1944, hopes it has at last summoned the firepower not only to match but surpass the American League's.

Manager Billy Southworth will field a starting lineup of National Leaguers that has a home run output of 97 to date this season. The American League's starting lineup shows a home run total of only 80.

Americans Still Favored

But nevertheless, notwithstanding, and with proper appreciation perhaps for the return of Joe Di Maggio plus the American League's habit of winning these All-Star games, the odds-makers are quoting the National as a 5-to-4 under-dog.

Thirty-seven thousand fans will see the game in Brooklyn, with tickets long since exhausted or in the hands of scalpers and bringing as high as $20 per copy.

The fan-picked lineups of the two teams, clashing in the customers' dream game, present all the ingredients of a pitcher's nightmare. Rare is the hitter who isn't a .300 batter or a dangerous extra-base hitting threat.

Parnell to Start

Manager Lou Boudreau, who last contested with Southworth when he piloted his Cleveland Indians to victory over the Braves in the 1948 World Series, will send Boston's ace southpaw, Mel Parnell, to the mound at the outset.

Unlike Southworth, Boudreau didn't temporize with his pitching selection. Southworth last night was undecided whether his starting pitcher would be Warren Spahn (9-8), the Braves left-hander, or George Munger (6-4), Cardinal right hander. Parnell has a record of 11-5.

The Washington club's rooting interest is represented by Eddie Robinson, .295 hitter and producer of 11 home runs, who was an

Williams Breaks Rib, May Miss Classic

New York, July 11 (U.P.).—Boston's slugging Ted Williams has suffered a broken rib and may not be able to play in tomorrow's sixteenth renewal of the major league baseball All-Star game, it was revealed tonight.

Williams injured the rib in a vain but spectacular diving attempt at a Joe DiMaggio home run at Yankee Stadium, July 4. It bothered him some, but he did not have X-rays taken until today, when he learned that the rib is broken.

Williams already had been named to the American League starting team for the classic at Ebbets Field tomorrow.

Williams did not play in tonight's Red Sox-Braves exhibition at Boston, but said he would be on hand for the all-star classic at Ebbets Field. He added that he did not know if he would play.

American Manager Lou Boudreau said he hadn't heard from Williams, but still was counting on using him. If Williams does not start, Dale Mitchell of Cleveland probably will.

Whelchel Officially Takes Over

Running Halfback Chief Skin Need, New Coach Declares

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

"Most of all we need a ball-packing halfback!"

That was Rear Admiral John E. Whelchel's summary of the situation yesterday as he took over the head coach's desk at the Washington Redskins' office.

The "retiring" naval officer—he'll be out of the service August 1 although he's free of duties now—was outspoken in his views of his new job.

"No team ever went anywhere without a halfback who could go places. We've got to bring in one or develop one. There will definitely be more running plays in the Redskins offense this year."

Skins Leave July 29

The new coach, whose last football team was the Naval Academy eleven of 1943, straightened out a lot of things in his pretraining season press interviews. The Skins will leave July 29 for Los Angeles and drills at Occidental College.

"Is coach all right?"

"My name is John," the soft-spoken former officer answered but my mother called me "Billick" and my friends have called me that for 50 years. Why, I don't know."

Another former enlisted man wondered about Redskin discipline. Would it be as rigid as Naval disclipine?

"The discipline will take care of itself," Whelchel said, "as long as we're winning. Victories are great discipline breeders." He said nothing about losses.

No Changes Due

According to the new mentor the Redskins will make no change in their T-formation offense because, "it's deceptive enough." They won't use a strict two platoon system on offense and defense, they need a better pass defense and running game.

He displayed a remarkable knowledge of Redskin player personel with the exception of a remark that, "Tom Farmer might be the halfback we need." The former Iowa University star is not expected to return to the Redskins.

"Don't expect too much of Harry Gilmer," he said. "Sammy Baugh will go on supplying the polish on this team until Gilmer learns the quarterbacking job. The old-timers like Jim Peebles, John Adams and Dick Pollion will be the backbone of the club but we must depend on such rookies as Bob Goode, Laurie Niemi, Len Szafaryn and Pete Stout . . ."

Old-Timers Win Net Titles

Spring Lake, N. J., July 11 (AP).—Veteran performers came through again today in the 41st annual Spring Lake invitation tennis tournament as Frankie Parker of Los Angeles won the singles and the team of Billy Talbert of Wilmington, Del., and Gardner Mulloy of Miami, Fla., took the doubles.

Parker grabbed the singles crown for the 10th time by coming from behind to defeat Talbert, 3—6, 7—5, 6—4, 6—0. Once again the mechanical man of tennis outlasted and outsteadied his foe, twice breaking Talbert's service for the crucial games.

In the bitter doubles battle, Talbert and Mulloy, current United States champions, also had to struggle from behind winning over Parker and Richard "Pancho" Gonzales of Los Angeles, 4—6, 6—0, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2. Superior volleying and overhead play saved the day for the team which has won the national crown four times.

By his steady performance in the singles, Parker gained one leg on the now Clifferd Hemphill singles bowl. He already has retired three such trophies.

For Parker and Gonzales, who recently won the Wimbledon championship, it was the first defeat of their short career together.

Owen's Old Semipro Team After Haefner

Pierre, S. D., July 11 (AP).—The Winner, S. D., Pheasants, a semi-pro club, is willing to take on Mickey Haefner, Washington Senator hurler, who was tossed off the club for "indifferent performance."

Art Hayes, who took over management of the Pheasants when Mickey Owen was reinstated with Brooklyn of the National League, wired Haefner today:

"Have good paying pitching and managing job open with Winner Pheasants baseball team. Answer your best terms by wire. As you can see the Winner team produced some real major leaguers.

After six years as a mainstay with the American League Senators, Haefner was relieved by Owner Clark Griffith for "indifferent performance."

Ray Wins With Ease; Verdict Is Unanimous

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Municipal Stadium, Philadelphia, July 11.—Sugar Ray Robinson gave Cuba's Kid Gavilan a trimming that was anything but sugar-coated and successfully defended his world's welterweight championship here tonight.

Countering the Kid's best efforts with devastating punches thrown from the fastest pair of hands in boxing, Robinson so dominated the 15-round affair that the unanimous decision of Referee Charley Daggert and two judges was but a mere formality.

Robinson, in reality, fought two fights in less than 12 hours. He won his battle against the scales, making the 147 pound welterweight limit at 11 a. m. after a drying-out process that his handlers feared would leave him weak for his fifth title defense.

Tonight he spotted Gavilan three of the first four rounds and then settled down to carve out a victory in the same ring where Gene Tunney upset Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight title 23 years ago.

Pattern Set Early

The pattern of the fight was established in the early rounds. It was Gavilan, who at 23 was four years younger than Robinson and two and a half pounds lighter, forcing the fight and Robinson blocking, slipping with blows and counter-punching beautifully.

Renewing the rivalry which started in New York last September when Robinson won a 10-round decision in a nontitle bout, the pair went at it at top speed all the way, but saved their best for the last two rounds.

Entering the fourteenth, Gavilan was so far in arrears that only a knockout could save him and he elected to try for this avenue of escape.

He sent Robinson reeling against the ropes and in the last 20 seconds of the round hit the Harlem hotshot with everything except the bell without one return from Robinson.

Didn't Show It

If Robinson was hurt, however, he didn't show it. He maintained that never-changing cool, confident expressio nthat he brought into the ring with him and came back in the last round to stagger Gavilan three times with crunching left hooks that almost brought the knockout the crowd roared for.

It was simply a case of a really good fighter—that's Senor Gerardo Gonzales, fighting as Kid Gavilan—meeting a better fighter, that's Walker Smith, who fights (and how) as Sugar Ray Robinson.

The attendance was 27,805, which is only a drop in this huge horseshoe bowl which seats 103,000, but the gross receipts were very satisfactory—$175,754.

Gavilan Serenaded

Gavilan, two-time conquerer of lightweight champion Ike Williams in non-title bouts, entered the ring serenaded by the brassy strains of a rhumba from a Cuban band which was part of a crowd of thousands of Latins on hand to cheer on their standard bearer.

Robinson, cool and confident, entered on the long end of the 2-1 odds and amid a mighty ovation from the assembly, which included retired heavyweight titleholders Joe Louis and Jack Dempsey and present middleweight ruler, Jake La Motta.

Fighting in a semicrouch, Gavilan carried the fight to Robinson, digging short lefts to the body and

Cessation Wins Rodier Purse for Third Straight Victory

Bill Bennings . . .

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS: Apprentice Jockey Richard Lawless finally rode his first winner, officially that is. Several days ago he was first to the wire but his mount was disqualified. Yesterday, he booted Shangrila Stable's Equinow into the wire and once again he was called upstairs to defend a foul claimed by Jockey J. R. Hill who rode War Spy into third position. This time the stewards saw it his way and the victory stuck at a $24.20 mutuel. The winner did not live up to his dam's name. She is a mare named Come Down—and the number didn't. Lawless, who has much to learn in a riding way, is an ice quiet kid who listens a lot. Now that he is over the hump perhaps we can expect him to improve steadily. See you on the rail. BILL.

Cinch 2d; Gunner, Favorite, 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charlestown, W. Va., July 11.—Mrs. H. R. Miller's Cessation, claimed out of her previous race for $2500, moved into allowance company today with definite success. The five year old mare who won two races, one here and another at Delaware Park for C. M. Simpson of Washington, D. C., made it three in a row today, winning the Henry Tait Rodier Purse.

With Jockey Bobby Shirey doing the booting, Cessation finished three lengths in front of C. P. Chenoweth's Cinch. Two additional lengths back came S. H. Rogers' Gunner, the favorite, to be third in the starting field of seven.

Under clear skies and over a fast track, Cessation was clocked in 1.17 2/5 for the about six furlongs, and her backers collected at the rate of $6.60 for the usual duece investment.

The daily double paid $11.80 and was connected on 672 tickets showing the 2 and 8 combination. L. Angel's Tolteca, under good handling by J. R. Hill, won the first race at a $6 mutuel.

In the second event the sire Bull Moose added another victory to the long list fo rhis sons and daughters. This time, it was Dr. H. B. Langdon's Some Moose, a $3.20 favorite. She galloped home with Apprentice Johnny Regalbuto in the saddle. Trainer W. W. Smith and Jockey Buddy Root accounted for their daily purse with Miss Virginia McKenney's Equirun, paying a 21.40 mutuel.

In the fifth race, the Washington, D. C. owned gelding whipped seven other 3-year-olds under good riding. Second was H. M. Simpson's By Accident with F. W. Page's Merry Nymph third. The winner was clocked in 1:30 for the about 7 furlongs.

22-Pound Dolphin Landed

Boy, 13, Nabs 482-lb. Tuna Off Nova Scotia

By Ralph Murdock

THE UNEXPECTED always happens in fishing. For days veteran big game anglers have been trolling Soldiers Rip, famed Nova Scotia tuna ground, each hoping to hook the first tuna.

Murdock

But it remained for a 13-year-old schoolboy to turn the trick. Edward Bush landed a 482-pounder. It was the first bluefin captured in this spot. It took 2 hours and 40 minutes to do it.

A 22-pound dolphin was landed landed by Paul Skelly of Washington, D. C., at Ocean City, Md. He was fishing on the Cecil with Capt. Bill Barbage at the helm.

Clarence Duckett, his son Walton and Raymond Cox while drifting off Deep Creek pulled in 15 croakers. They used shrimp and fished only one and a half hours.

Incidentally, here's a 16-foot rowboat full of enthusiastic anglers. They are George Burkett, his wife, Lillian, and George, Jr., age 9, and Dean Bronzonie, his wife, Marie, and Deanie, another junior, age 12. While drifting off Franklin Manor they boated 16 large croakers. The largest was 21½ inches long and weighed 4 pounds.

FERDINAND WALTER, Albert LeFave and Preston Ray, affectionally called "The General," were unable to procure a large boat at Herring Bay. Weird tales of how many fish were caught the night before prompted the "three musketeers" to make the trip "a la rowboat." A northeaster made the water choppy and the wind velocity increased as they arrived at the fishing grounds. They drifted because the anchor would not hold due to the high winds. The trio nabbed 13 croakers.

Herb Goodman, local angler and Remington Rand executive who has been confined to Doctor's Hospital for two weeks, got the official nod from his physician, Dr. John Sullivan, to return to his duties. A final check-up of Goodman's condition will be made on Wednesday from a fishing boat on Chesapeake Bay where the doctor and his patient expect to do battle with the hardheads. The fishing trip was planned during Herb's illness.

Six anglers, Herbert Duncan, Roy E. Mills, Jack Prince, Mrs. Ruby Quinn, and her daughter Linda, 6 years old, and Dorothy Murdock caught 90 better than average spot, 6 perch and 7 big hardheads on Sammy Manifold's boat "Miss Deale" off Holland Point Bar Sunday evening. Linda, age 6, caught 4 spot. It was her initial effort but she gave up fishing when four big croakers were hauled in. She said she preferred catching the little ones and was afraid the big ones might pull her overboard. Bribes of ice cream cones and cookies failed to change her mind.

Joe DiMaggio Starts for AL

overwhelming choice for the first base job and is expected to play the entire game. He was the only Nat to make the A.L. All-Star team.

When Parnell finishes his limited three-inning stint, Boudreau is expected to call on Virgil Trucks of the Tigers, the fastballer of his six-man staff; or Vic Raschi, the Yankees' big winner of 13 games against three defeats.

Deemed certain to see action on the mound for the National Leaguers after Spahn and Munger have finished their pitching duties is Howie Pollet, the Cardinals' clever left hander. The game, 16th of the series which has seen the American League triumph 11 times, is history-making in the sense that for the first time a Negro has been voted on the teams. And no fewer than four of the five Negroes in the majors made the squad—Jackie Robinson, Pitcher Don Newcombe and Catcher Roy Campanella, of the Dodgers; and Outfielder Larry Doby of the Indians.

American League hopes took a bright turn 10 days ago when Joe DiMaggio ended his bench-sitting, returned to the Yankee lineup, and started swatting homers in such profusion he was honored with a special berth on the squad.

DiMaggio will start in center field, replacing the injured Tommy Henrich of the Yankees, who is still recovering from stomach injuries suffered when he fell across a bat rack in Washington.

Gambatese, Curtin Bow In Openers

Los Angeles, July 11.—Pat Martino of Washington got past his first-round opponent today to enter the second round of the National Public Links golf championship over the new Rancho golf course here. Pat went to the fourth round last year at Atlanta.

Pat, on leave from his job at FHA, had an easy time defeating Rollin Baxter, 17-year-old student from Peoria, Ill, 5 and 4. Tomorrow he faces Kenneth Oglesby of Tucson, Ariz.

The two other Washington entrants, Joe Gambatese, McGraw-Hill labor writer, and John Curtin, were eliminated in their opening matches this morning.

Joe ran into sub-par golf by Sylvester Ferrara, San Francisco iron worker, and lost, 4 and 2. Ferrara shot a one-under-par 34 to Joe's 37, giving him a three-up lead at the turn.

Curtin, a TV installer, got the jump on John Andrews, Nashville, Tenn., salesman, by winning the second hole, but he faded to a first-nine 40 and was three down, finally losing, 4 and 3.

Martino took a three-up lead over Baxter at the turn with a 39, four over par. He closed the match by winning the thirteenth with a birdie 3 and the next hole with a par 4.

One of the two Baltimore entrants, who also qualified at Washington, won his first match. He is George Walter, who defeated Omer S. Doll of Louisville, 1 up. The other, Ray Heins, lost to Russell Rader of Indianapolis, 5 up and 4.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY rowing clubs were represented at the Peoples Regatta at Philadelphia over the July 4 weekend, by far the largest group ever to attend the time-honored rowing classic. Dempsey's Boat Club, Washington Canoe Club, Potomac Boat Club and Old Dominion Boat Club entered a number of the events to take top honors and the silverware in six senior events. Dusty Rhodes, Washington Canoe Club racing ace, also took the high point honors for individual events against a stellar field.

Firm Denied War Profits of 50-100%

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Court of Claims yesterday unanimously refused as "unthinkable" a business firm's demands that the Government be forced to pay profits of "50 to 100 per cent" on war-time contracts for vital airplane parts.

About $375,500 was involved in the suit brought by the Lord Manufacturing Co., a family concern of Erie, Pa., which made rubber mountings to absorb shock in plane frames and instruments.

Chief Judge Marvin Jones, speaking for the five-man court in an opinion full of praise for the firm's head, H. C. Lord, and his "Horatio Alger success story," declared nonetheless that his company should have been satisfied to make 10-per-cent profits over cost, the same as "businessmen generally" who were supplying the armed forces, including Lord's few competitors.

The judge said that "men and women were uncomplainingly permitting themselves to be drafted" for war work, other "women and even children were driving tractors in the hot sun" to produce food, and young men "were taken from their homes to face hardship and even death on distant fields."

In such times, Jones went on, "it is unthinkable that a man would insist on profits of 50 to 100 per cent; and it is inconceivable that any court would allow any such profits as just compensation." He added that "the doctrine that prices may be based on what the traffic will bear has no place in our national economy at such a time."

A detailed report on the firm showed total profits running as high as 172 per cent in 1940 and 168 per cent in 1941. In the 10 months of 1944 the company made almost 10 million dollars or about 58 per cent on just over 28 million dollars in sales.

The Army and Navy tried to bargain with Lord, the record shows, but, said Jones, he "persistently refused to come to terms on any reasonable basis."

Finally, the services under wartime law ordered him to reduce prices to plane manufacturers who, in turn, were being paid by the Government. The War Department in 1944 determined that $5,700,000 of 1942 profits were excessive and a Tax Court case is now pending in an effort to recover the money for the Government.

Jones said Lord had worked many years on his inventions and through patents was entitled to a profit. He said the court had "an unstinted admiration for the genius, the persistence and the industry of a man of the type of H. C. Lord."

The judge is a former House member who served for a time in 1943 as assistant to Economic Stabilizer James F. Byrnes as well as acting War Food Administrator. He declared the court hoped that the "lure of a reward in the future" may not be lost "in the present striving for the Government to furnish security to all its citizens."

A finding of fact accompanying the court's opinion shows that Lord, his wife and son, plowed back into the firm much of the profit. Lord drew salaries, profits and dividends running as high as $160,000 a year, his son as much as $135,000 and his wife just under $50,000.

Lord was the sole source of supply for many of his products and the airplane firms had to have them regardless of cost. Some were "spare parts urgently needed" to maintain planes then in service.

A 1942 audit showed profits on individual products ranged from 42 per cent to 808 per cent on Air Force contracts. At that time Lord was offering his products at prices which would have meant profits of from 140 to 275 per cent.

The Army and Navy held several conferences with the Lord firm in 1944 and at one time offered to pay a 15 per cent profit but Lord would not agree. Mandatory action was then taken against the company to force it to deliver its product at the armed forces' prices.

After this military order, Lord complained and began cutting its shipments to plane manufacturers. Jones said. The services sent "strongly worded telegrams" and finally forbade the firm to alter any of its contracs.

Jones concluded by declaring the court was "persuaded" Lord "along with all other contractors will in the long run realize that prices in a national emergency must be kept in the range of reason and that, insofar as is practicable, citizens should be treated alike."

'Crump' Republican Opens Law Office Here

By Robert S. Allen

Bailey Walsh, a "Crump Republican" of Memphis, Tenn., has opened a law office in the Capital—and therein lies a new story in the protracted battle over the fabulously rich oil tidelands.

Walsh was a lieutenant of former Republican National Chairman Carroll Reece. Walsh's wife is now a clerk in the office of aged Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee and a political ally of Ed Crump erstwhile boss of Memphis.

Walsh has been hired by Gov. Earl Long of Louisiana to represent that State on the tideland oil issue. Walsh has been sitting in on for weeks on this 30-billion-dollar prize between officials of the Justice and Interior Departments, congressional leaders and State representatives.

Another interesting Louisiana spokesman, in these conferences, is Leander Perez. Governor Long made him special assistant attorney general for this particular job. Long, largely, owes his election to Perez. Similarly, Long's nephew, Russell, is in the Senate today chiefly through Perez' political and financial support.

The iron-handed "czar" of two tidewater counties, Perez has represented big oil and sulphur interests for many years. In 1948 he was one of the "founding fathers" of the Dixiecrat movement.

Perez and Walsh are the two men who have been representing Louisiana's "State rights" claim in the tideland oil battle.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, Texas, has been the ball-carrier in the closed-door pow-wows on a possible "compromise" between the Federal Government and the States.

So far, these deliberations have got nowhere.

Senator Joe O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Interior Affairs Committee, vigorously supports the Government's claim to tideland oil. But in an effort to break the deadlock, he has offered a compromise he considers equitable to both sides. Its main features are as follows:

The Federal Government to hold title to all tideland oil.

The States to manage for the Government existing tideland leases, on a royalty basis to be fixed by Congress.

New tideland wells to be developed by the Interior Department, with the States receiving a royalty percentage fixed by Congress.

In the secret deliberations to date, State spokesmen have balked at any plan that did not give them full claim to the cream of the oil tidelands.

Defense Officials Study 'Paper Plans' For Civilian Firing

Plans calling for the lay-off of 200,000 civilian employes in the Army, Navy, and Air Force within the next year are being studied by Defense officials. They were drawn up on orders from Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

A top defense official revealed what he described as these "paper plans," on which no final decision has been made:

For Navy to lay off 125,000 of its 350,000 civilian, or a whopping slash of more than 30 per cent;

For the Army to fire a minimum of 50,000 of its 377,000 civilians, and to make even greater reductions if its occupation duties are ended in the next year, and,

For Air Force to cut its 167,000-man staff by 25,000.

It's proposed that 100,000 of the jobs be wiped out before December 31, and another 100,000 be abolished by June 30, 1950.

If the cuts are carried through as proposed on paper, it would be probable that around 15,000 military civilians in and nearby this city would lose their jobs.

The three services have a total of 895,000 civilian employes in this country and overseas, of whom 70,000 are employed in the Washington area. The 200,000 cut, if made, would be a reduction of 22 per cent. If the same percentage is applied to the civilian jobs here, more than 15,000 of them would be knocked out.

The wholesale firing plan is meeting opposition in the Defense high command because it's coupled with a recommendation that military people be placed in some of the vacated civilian jobs. It's argued that it will eventually cost Uncle Sam far more to have the same job done by a military man than a civilian. Therefore, it's said, the proposed civilian firings can't be made in the name of economy, unless the jobs are abolished altogether.

A study of the comparative costs of having identical jobs done by military people and civilians is being made for Secretary Johnson, it was learned.

Advocates of the more-military-and-fewer-civilians policy are also known to be critical of the Civil Service system, and the manner in which it is being operated. Secretary Johnson is one of what seems to be a growing group in Government whose members have lost patience with the Civil Service Commission. In fact, several of the powerful members of this group have threatened to try to get either the President or Congress to exempt their employes from Civil Service.

No substantial change in civilian personnel would have to be made in the military services under the 1950 defense appropriation bill as passed by the House. Under it, Navy would have to knock out from 7000 to 10,000 jobs; the Army less than 5000, and Air Force and the Defense Secretary would increase their staffs by several thousand.

However, the 15-billion money bill is still in the Senate Appropriations Committee and a cut of at least a billion dollars is now indicated. Secretary Johnson told the committee that upwards of a billion dollars could be saved by the elimination of unnecessary civilian personnel.

The Senate, nevertheless, isn't expected to cut out funds for anything like 200,000 civilian jobs. Johnson is reported eager to have a free hand in making personnel cuts whenever and whereever he believes they can be made without damaging the Nation's security.

During the war, the Army, which also included the Air Force, had a high 1,500,000 civilians in this country, and the Navy had an 800,000 peak. Both percentage-wise and numerically, the Army has reduced its civilian staff far more than the Navy.

The bulk of the civilian jobs in the military services are in production, repair and research—jobs such as building and repairing ships, of making and storing powder, guns, and other war weapons, and of operating air fields. A comparatively small number, by comparsion, have white-collar office jobs.

3 Inquiries Are Started In Yacht Explosion

Coast Guard, Fire Marshal of D. C., Police Probe Blast Killing Two Men

The Coast Guard, the Washington fire marshal and the police homicide squad launched investigations yesterday into the cause of the explosion aboard a luxury-yacht which killed two persons and critically injured two others Sunday.

The blast demolished the 38-foot cabin cruiser Halcyon as it was about to shove off the fueling dock at the Corinthian Yacht Club, 2d and V sts. se., for a luncheon cruise down the Potomac.

Acting Fire Marshal R. A. Warfield said after preliminary investigation yesterday that he believed the explosion was touched off by vapor gas in the boat's engine room. Warfield said it would take at least a week to wind up his inquiry.

The Fifth Coast Guard District in Norfolk yesterday appointed a board of officers who will begin open hearings in Washington in a few days. The homicide squad will work with the Coast Guard.

The blast killed Army public relations chief, Maj. Gen. Vernon E. Prichard, 57, and Wilfred Painter, 41, a Naval Reserve commodore who had returned from Athens, Greece, Friday. Both were guests aboard the yacht.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued temporary certificates of death due to injuries in both cases. He withheld permanent certificates pending completion of the homicide squad investigation.

Back Broken, Chest Crushed

Dr. MacDonald said General Prichard died of a broken back, crushed chest, ruptured viscera, hemorrhage and shock. He said Painter died of a crushed chest and abdomen; hemorrhage and shock.

Still in critical condition in Bethesda Naval Hospital was Capt. Sergius N. Ferris Luboshez, USN, another guest. He suffered multiple fractures of both legs, severe shock, possible fractured spine and possible internal injuries. Doctors said Captain Luboshez was "slightly better" yesterday.

In "very serious" condition at Casualty Hospital was Johannes Johannesen, 40, steward of the Corinthian Yacht Club, who was acting as steward for the Halcyon. Johannesen was severely burned about the head and upper torso and was receiving plasma treatments yesterday.

Johannesen's brother-in-law, Thomas L. Miller, 23, who was skipper for the cruise, was also in Casualty Hospital in "satisfactory condition," suffering from first, second and third degree burns.

Five other passengers aboard, including host Henry A. Dudley, jr., a member of the Paul V. McNutt law firm, were slightly injured. The others were socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, the wife of General Pritchard and Mrs. Leslie Williams of 1535 Mount Eagle pl., Alexandria.

It was generally agreed yesterday the cause of the tragic blast was ignition of gas fumes, accumulated in the bilge during refueling, by a spark when the engine was turned over.

Owner Is Baffled

But Bolling Powell, jr., Dudley's law partner and owner of the boat who returned yesterday from a trip to Bermuda, said he was "completely baffled" as to how this could have happened.

Powell said the boat had been inspected and passed by the Coast Guard within the past 30 days. Powell said he had three electric blowers installed and an extra pair of deck ventilators for the purpose of drawing off gas vapor.

Powell said he was told by Dudley that all three blowers were operating in the engine room throughout the refueling period and that Johannesen waited at least 10 minutes for any possible vapor to draw off before he went down to the engine room to adjust the starter.

These facts, together with the fact that the engine hatch was open when the explosion occurred, make the fuel vapor puzzling, Powell said, but he admitted he could think of no other plausible theory.

The 38-foot vessel, equipped with a flying bridge, sleeping quarters for six, and a 6-cylinder, 95-horsepower Gray Marine engine, was worth about $10,000 and was insured, Powell said.

He said he bought the boat a year-and-a-half ago, recently refurbished it, and had never had any trouble with it. The boat was built in 1930 and was on Coast Guard patrol duty in the Potomac and Chesapeake Bay during the war.

Police Lift 300-Lb. Safe From River

Scorning crane help, two Harbor policemen strained to lift a 300-pound half-submerged safe yesterday from the Anacostia River near Sousa Bridge.

The safe was empty, its door torn off and drawers empty.

The policemen, Corpl. Marion G. Randall and Pvt. William D. DeGroot, turned the safe over to detectives to locate its owner.

Annexation Suit Voted by Falls Church

The Falls Church City Council voted unanimously last night to begin court proceedings as soon as possible to annex approximately 15 square miles of additional territory about 7½ times its present area

The action will be filed by City Attorney LaRue Van Meter under a special Virginia State law which permits municipalities to bring suit for such expansions. He said Front Royal, Va., in a similar case, recently increased its own size by eight times.

The Council rejected a request for a public hearing before voting the annexation ordinance. The request was presented by Harold A. Ward, who said he represented an annexation study group of residents of the area.

Under the law, the Commonwealth Attorney of Fairfax County will defend the action before Fairfax County Circuit Court. He will represent any residents of the proposed annexation area, who object and also the Fairfax County government which vigorously opposes the plan because of the possible loss to it in taxes.

Valuation for tax purposes of the proposed annexation area is about 12 million dollars in real estate and three million dollars in personal property, according to Van Meter.

No Tax Rise for Fve Years

After the ordinance, including direction for starting the suit, was voted, Van Meter said that the case will be brought before the court this fall, and "if we fight it through, annexation should begin at the beginning of the fiscal year 1951 (July 1, 1950)."

The ordinance as adopted last night provides that no higher taxes may be levied by Falls Church against the annexed area for five years than would be levied by Fairfax County if it remained unannexed.

Van Meter said that Falls Church, with only 2 square miles of area, is now "one of the smallest cities in the country."

The ordinance asserts that the area proposed for inclusion in Falls Church constitutes a natural and homogenous unified area. It said that residents of the area now use to a greater or less extent the religious, fraternal, social, banking and water facilities of the city; that the area now has poor police and fire protection and also uses these city services to augment its own.

Other Council Actions

In other actions last night, the Council:

Instructed Van Meter to bring court action to obtain from Fairfax County authorities complete city control of the Falls Church High School and Oak Street School.

Announced it will consider the school budget along with other budgetary demands at a meeting July 25. Public hearing on the school budget is scheduled August 12.

Voted to authorize the School Board to borrow $25,000 for current expense pending receipts from taxation.

Music Aids Pageant in Alexandria

By Paul Hume

The sixteen episodes of Alexandria's historical drama, "Alexandria—Thy Sons," are happily graced with appropriate musical moments.

The pageant had its first showing last night in King's Meadow Amphitheater on the banks of the Potomac in the city now celebrating its 200th birthday. During the evening we heard a men's chorus lustily singing drinking songs and such old melodies of this country as "Shenandoah."

Observing the historical periods involved in the drama, Richard Bales, who arranged the musical score, drew on British music for the opening scenes. Handel, Purcell, and folk tunes from the British Isles wound through the score. "Greensleeves" one of the older melodies, rubbed elbows with music for the bagpipes.

These were played by the Washington Scottish Pipe Band, who brought along a young lady to dance the sword dance while the pipers skirled. George Washington's favorite gavotte was heard in the scene of his sixty-seventh birthday ball.

Bands from Fort Belvoir and the citizens' band of Alexandria played to bring the audience "Rule Britannia," switching at the proper moment to songs of young America.

Bales has a special affection for the music of Revolutionary days and has made several effective arrangements of it for various combinations. He has also done research in native music since that time. He was thus in familiar territory in all of last night's history. His score was well wrought, using the organ for the greater part of the time, not only in set pieces but also for sound effects as in the battle scenes.

Evelyn Davis and members of her modern dance group appear in the final scene, a prophetic allegory. For this sequence Bales wrote an original ballet score. We hope to be able to comment on it later.

Special praise goes to Theodore Schaefer for his excellent handling of the organ at every point in the long evening. One seldom hears background music at such occasions as skillfully and easily handled.

Drama Reviews 200 Years Of Alexandria's History

By Lee Grove

Storied Alexandria saw its first 200 years of picturesque history reviewed under the stars last night.

From the days in 1749 when a youthful George Washington helped John West, jr., survey the city to the day in 1861 when Robert E. Lee left the town to take command of the Army of Virginia, the historical drama, "Alexandria, Thy Sons" in music and drama held its audience in the specially constructed amphitheater on Lee street.

Produced by the Alexandria Bicentennial Commission, the pageant will be given at 8:30 p. m. each night concluding Sunday.

Approximately 500 persons are in the cast of the drama that climaxes the city's bicentennial celebration.

As it was in history, so in the pageant, many of the early scenes are bound inextricably with the life of George Washington.

Washington was a boy when he helped survey the town. He was in his early twenties when he commanded his ill-fated expedition ending in the surrender of Fort Necessity.

In the drama's succeeding scene he is shown participating in the bravely stupid expedition of General Braddock in 1755 that culminated in the general's death. Erle Weatherwax, playing the part of the bluff, headstrong old British general, brought many laughs in this scene in which soldiers from Fort Belvoir strengthened the cast.

Not all the story of Alexandria is that of George Washington, however. Patrick Henry, defending the right of an unorthodox man to preach without a license, is another Virginia son to come to life on the stage set against the River Potomac.

George Mason's Resolves, which spunkily set forth the rights of the aggrieved colonists, receives attention, and in another scene Mason is shown laboring on the Virginia Bill of Rights of 1776, amidst twinges of gout and interruptions by small fry.

Time passes; there is a last birthday ball for Washington at Gadsby's Tavern, and then the family of "Lighthorse Harry" Lee, including son Robert, move to Alexandria.

Lafayette, too, comes to Alexandria and talks to the future hero of the Confederacy.

In a final allegorical scene, Alexandria today and tomorrow is suggested with the future looking bright.

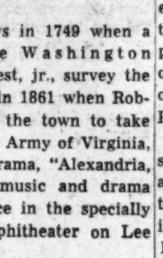
Through all the 16 scenes moves "Sandy—the Spirit of the Town," played by Gordon Wynn.

In addition to the military contingent from Fort Belvoir, pipers and dancers from the Washington Scottish Bagpipe Band participate in the program, written by T. Beverly Campbell and Howard Southgate, and directed by the latter.

Tickets for the pageant, costing from $1.20 to $3.60, are available at 1108 G st. nw., Washington, and this scene in which soldiers from 803 Cameron st., Alexandria.

Falls Church Schools Get Schmitt As Superintendent

Irvin H. Schmitt, 50, a researcher for the U. S. Office of Education, last night was appointed superintendent of Falls Church schools.



Schmitt

The naming of Schmitt by the Falls Church School Board marked the first such appointment since the schools were removed from control of Fairfax County by court order last June.

In another move, the school board adopted a tentative budget for 1949-1950 of $340,000 for operation of the schools. Of the total, $159,000 would be raised by a levy of $2.65 per $100 assessed valuation of real property and the remainder by State grants in aid and tuition from out-of-town pupils. The $2.65 tax levy is identical with that imposed by Fairfax County last year.

Largest item in the budget—$235,000—is earmarked for teachers' salaries and other instruction costs.

Schmitt, a former superintendent of schools in Davenport, Iowa, will assume his new duties on July 16 at a salary of $7000 a year.

He will have charge of three elementary schools and one high school, with a total of about 2200 pupils within the city limits.

Schmitt is married and is the father of two daughters and a son. A graduate of Coe College, Iowa, he holds a master's degree from the University of Iowa. He lives at 4808 South 30th st., Arlington.

Two More Days Of Home Rule Hearings Set

9 Witnesses Heard; 50 Applications To Testify Filed With Committee

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

House District Committee leaders yesterday scheduled two more days of hearings for this week on Washington home rule legislation.

District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) said the hearings will be held Thursday and Friday. He expressed hope that in those days it might be possible to complete the hearings.

Some 50 representatives of District organizations have filed requests with the committee for time to testify.

Nine witnesses have been heard, for and against the home rule plan, in three morning sessions since the Senate passed the home rule bill.

Announcement of the new hearings followed a weekend appeal from five Washington groups favoring home rule for a speedup in the House hearings.

The groups were the Washington Home Rule Committee, Central Suffrage Conference, District chapters of the League of Women Voters and Americans for Democratic Action and the District Democratic Central Committee.

While McMillan's announcement raised the chance that the hearings might wind up this week, there was no assurance of an early date for a home-rule bill to be reported out of the District Judiciary Subcommittee which now has charge of it.

In fact, shortly before McMillan set the hearing dates, Judiciary Subcommittee Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) had outlined to the District Committee in a meeting a number of bills which require the subcommittee's attention.

In the list, Harris mentioned, with a grin at the press table, the home-rule measure as one in which not much interest was being shown.

He also mentioned that the hearings would be scheduled, and McMillan followed it up by naming the days.

Harris said that among the other bills his subcommittee is slated to consider are several proposed revisions in the District liquor laws, bills for registration of architects and engineers, and a bill to authorize a national memorial stadium in the District.

Escapes Fine

Juror's Shout At Trial Irks Judge

A District Court juror narrowly missed having to pay a $10 fine yesterday for yelling "Who the hell is Pinkney?" during a murder trial.

The fine was imposed but was later remitted by Judge David A. Pine on the juror, Edwin F. Fallon, 41, an engraver, of 409 Varnum st. nw. The incident occurred during the second-degree murder trial of Roscoe L. Craige, 34, of 1414 Morris rd. se.

Assistant United States Attorney Grace Stiles made her opening address and referred to the stabbing victim, Henry I. Pickney, 42, of 1021 Lincoln pl. se., as the "deceased."

Then, Defense Attorney John H. Wilson began his address and repeatedly referred to "Pinkney" and once related how "Pinkney" was found in a pool of blood.

It was at that point that Fallon made his outcry, "Who the hell is Pinkney?"

At the conclusion of Wilson's address, Judge Pine called Fallon and fined him $10 for upsetting the court's decorum. Fallon explained that his remark was spontaneous and not intentional, and the fine was excused.

Fallon also was excused from the jury, the 11 other members remaining to hear the case after the attorneys stipulated as to its propriety.

The jury found Craige guilty of manslaughter. Sentence was deferred pending a probation office report.

Bill for 3 New Judges Is Approved

A bill to add three judges to the Municipal Court was approved yesterday by the House District Committee.

The court now has 10 judges. The increase was strongly recommended by the District Bar Association, the District Commissioners and by local judges, to handle a steadily increasing work load.

Harris Amendment

The committee, at the suggestion of Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), wrote into the bill an amendment designed to have the judgeships filled by lawyers from the United States Attorney's and Corporation Counsels' offices here, as well as by lawyers with five years in private legal practice in the District.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West pointed out that the amendment would not change the requirement now in the law, that appointees to the Municipal Court bench must have been bona fide District residents for five years.

Other Bills Approved

The committee also approved bills to:

1. Give the District a new law governing formation and operation of corporations here.

2. Remove the District residence requirement for members of the Commission on Mental Health.

3. Provide for admission of paying patients to the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, D. C.

4. Authorize issuance of a chiropractor's license to Dr. Abraham J. Ehrlich.

For the second consecutive meeting, the committee deferred action on a bill to let the District adopt modern spraying methods to kill weeds on private property.

Agreement May Be Near On Play Areas

The District Recreation Board today may settle the controversy over who will run the city's play argas—and how they will be run.

The board's regular monthly meeting at 2:30 p. m. will consider results of a closed conference yesterday with Interior Department officials and the District Commissioners.

Agreed on Terms

Nearly two weeks ago, the board's by-laws committee agreed on terms under which it would take over. Interior's facilities, including six swimming pools, one of which now is closed as a result of racial clashes.

The terms were never made public but are known to include a by-laws change to incorporate a pledge to eventually end segregation. The board now operates many of its facilities on a segregated basis while Interior has fought for non-segregation.

Silent on Results

Interior objected to some parts of the board's proposal and yesterday's meeting was to smooth out the difficulties. But officials declined to state any results and Interior Secretary J. A. Krug refused to talk to reporters.

Attending were Krug, Undersecretary Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary C. Girard Davidson, the three Commissioners, A. E. Demaray representing the National Park Service, and the Recreation Board's negotiating committee—Chairman Harry S. Wender, James E. Schwab and Superintendent Milo F. Christiansen.

New D. C. Polio Case Reported; Area Total Now 14

A new case of poliomyelitis in the District, bringing the total number this year to five here and 14 in the Greater Washington area, was reported yesterday to the Health Department.

The victim was a 20-month-old girl, living in the 100 block of D st. se. She was admitted Sunday to Children's Hospital.

The Health Department said yesterday that the District on the same date last year had three cases of infantile paralysis reported.

Suit Asks $25,000 Over Dog Biting Boy

Damages of $25,000 were demanded is a suit filed yesterday in District Court as the result of a dog biting a child.

The suit was filed by Dr. William Robert Perkins, jr., 4625 Albemarle st. nw., in behalf of his son, William 3d, 9.

The defendant is Robert A. Maurer, jr., 4436 Burlington pl. nw., commercial supervisor of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

According to the suit filed through Attorney Jeff Busby, the Perkins boy was bitten as the dog, "Gismo, jr." leaned over the fence of the Maurer back yard, on June 6. William suffered cuts of his lip and permanent disfigurement, according to the suit.

Mother Claims It

Dispute Over Man's Body Ends

Dispute over who was to bury the body of Nathaniel Nuttingham, about 30, ended yesterday in District Court here with appearance df Mrs. Virginia Franklin Butler, Culpeper, Va., who made affidavit she was his mother.

Nuttingham of 1620 4th st. nw., a Public Building Agency guard, died on July 3 of a stab wound. Authorities could locate no next of kin. Two groups of friends raised funds for a funeral and each hired an undertaker and made claim for the body. In view of the rival claims, Frank A. Mena, master of the District Morgue, refused to turn it over to either undertaker. One, Robert Robinson, brought suit against Mena to obtain it. On Mrs. Butler's appearance yesterday, she claimed it and turned it over to the other undertaker, Taft Williams.

Library Relaxes Rules

Special vacation reading privileges, effective immediately, were announced yesterday by the District Public Library.

The relaxed rules permit borrowers to take up to 10 books, fiction or non-fiction, and keep them out until October 1. Books in popular demand, however, are restricted to the customary two-week period.

Rabies Program Started

The Health Department's program of immunizing dogs against rabies opened yesterday at 12 schools scattered throughout the city.

The centers where dogs are given free "rabies shots" are open Monday, Wednesday and Fridays until August 5 from 4 to 6 p. m. They will not be open on rainy days.

The program, the fifth conducted by the city, has cut the number of dogs found to be nabid from 107 in 1945 to the point where there have been no rabid dogs reported since October, 1947.

Handicapped Organize

A lodge of the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped was organized last night in the home of James Roberts, paraplegic insurance agent, of 1304 N. Quincy st., Arlington.

A nominating committee was formed and will present a slate of officers at the next meeting July 25 in Roberts' home. National president Paul Strachan will deliver a charter then.

Thieves Get $400

Florian Chavez, general manager of the Citrus Products Co. at 1229 34th st. nw., told police yesterday thieves broke into the company office sometime over the weekend and stole about $400 from an unlocked safe.

World Bank Chief Greets Foreign Students

The Washington Post

INQUISITIVE VISITORS—Bent on learning all they could in a limited time, 32 students from foreign countries, who have been studying in the United States on American Field Service Scholarships, visited the World Bank office yesterday in the course of a tour of Washington. Pictured here, being greeted by Eugene R. 32 Students From 11 Nations Honored on Visit to Capital

Thirty-two students from 11 foreign countries, all alertly curious, visited Washington yesterday.

The boys and girls, ranging from 15 to 23 years, have just finished a year's study at various schools on American Field Service scholarships, and a 5330-mile trip from New York to the Rockies and back, transportation contributed by the Greyhound bus lines.

The students, who arrived Sunday and leave today for New York and their homes overseas, were luncheon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss yesterday noon, and dinner guests of the Washington Board of Trade last night.

Benjamin M. McKelway, editor of The Washington Evening Star, spoke at the dinner in the Congressional Hotel on the history of the District of Columbia's government. W. Herbert Gill, vice chairman of the board's education committee presided.

Others who spoke briefly included Thomas J. Groome, second vice president of the Board of Trade, and Jennings Randolph, former Democratic Representative from West Virginia, chairman of the World Trade Committee.

In addition to sightseeing, the students visited the World Bank yesterday. There they were addressed by Eugene H. Black, president, and other officials, and asked questions.

The students come from Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Italy, Greece, the Netherlands, Norway and Sweden.

Typical Visiting Student

Typical of the group is Helena Van Manen, who will observe her nineteenth birthday August 30. She comes from Driebergen, a village about 10 miles from Utrecht in the Netherlands, and has been attending the Friends School, Wilmington, Del.

"The first two months I was here I was very disappointed," she said, "because I saw only the surface of the country, and it seemed to me everything I had heard about America's being interested only in material things was true.

"I heard a lot about freedom, but, when I thought about your minority problems, it seemed to be just talk.

"I couldn't understand young people's standards and conversation because I tested them against my own.

"Then I saw I was making a mistake, and had to start by seeing what the principles of living were here, and not to judge them by those at home.

Discovered Principles

"I was very much helped by school—studying history and the problems of America, and by attending church and meetings.

"Then I found the principles underlying education here are to make citizens, to make people stand up to life," Miss Van Manen said. "In my own country, the principle was only to put facts into students' heads."

As an example, she noted that students here were encouraged to read magazines and give their opinions, but if a Dutch student were studying the history of the Netherlands "there would be no discussion of current problems."

Miss Van Manen said she did not always approve of the application of American principles of education. "I sometimes think there is too much freedom to become one-sided, but the principles give students an opportunity to develop. Even though mistakes are made, there is future value in American education."

Gen. Yount Dies While Vacationing

Lieut. Gen. Barton K. Yount, 66, wartime commander of the Army Air Forces Training Command, died unexpectedly yesterday while vacationing at Oak Creek Lodge, north of Phoenix, Ariz.

Gen. Yount

An Associated Press dispatch said the general died shortly after midnight after a dinner party attended by Jimmy Stewart, the Hollywood actor.

In 1946, just before he retired from the Air Force, General Yount founded the American Institute for Foreign Trade at Thunderbird I Field, an Army Air Force training base near Glendale, Ariz. He was president of the organization at the time of his death.

The institute was investigated by a House surplus property disposal investigating committee when it was found it had received the $407,000 field for nothing from the War Assets Administration.

Investigation Dropped

General Yount asserted he had been very careful not to use his position as commander of the Air Force Training Command to influence the transaction, and the investigation was dropped after three days. The institute trains students for careers in foreign trade.

Born in Troy, Ohio, General Yount became an infantry lieutenant upon his graduation from West Point in 1907. He served in the infantry in this country, in Cuba and in China until 1917, when he switched to aviation with the rank of major.

The first of several tours of duty in Washington started in 1918 when General Yount was assigned to the office of the Director of the Air Service to help reorganize the air arm.

A year later, he went through pilot training and got his wings at Rockwell Field, Calif. In 1921 he began a three year tour as chief of the training division and later chief of the ROTC, National Guard and Organized Reserve section in the office of the Chief of Air Corps in Washington.

General Yount served here again in 1934, attended the Army Industrial College and Army War College in 1935 and 1936 and became chief of the Air Corps Training Command in July, 1943.

He also served as a military attache in Paris and was a delegate to several international aviation conferences. Among the decorations General Yount received during 43 years of service were the Distinguished Service Medal with oak leaf cluster, the Air Medal, the Legion of Merit, and honors from Great Britain, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Brazil, Mexico and China.

The general belonged to the Army and Navy Club and the Columbia Country Club here. He is survived by his wife and a son, Barton K. Yount, jr.

Gov. Jester of Texas Found Dead in Berth

Houston, Tex., July 11 (AP). — Gov. Beauford H. Jester, 56, a fighter for States' rights and Texas tidelands, was found dead of natural causes in a sleeping car berth today.

Jester waged war against Federal civil rights legislation with every weapon except desertion from the Democratic Party. Jester was credited with keeping Texas in President Truman's column last November.

He died some time last night on a train between Austin, the State capital, and Houston. He was en route to Galveston for a physical checkup and a rest after the longest legislative session in Texas history.

Poll Tax Killed

The Legislature backed up Jester's demands for civil rights legislation by the States: It voted to abolish the poll tax as a voting requirement and it made lynching a death penalty offense. It adjourned only last week.

Jester was serving the seventh month of his second term as Governor. He will be succeeded by 41-year-old Allan Shivers, serving his second term as lieutenant governor. Jester was a Corsicana lawyer and a farmer. His father had been lieutenant governor in the 1890s.

Jester's body was found by a Pullman porter at 7:30 a. m. (CST). Justice of Peace Tom Maes, in an official inquest verdict, said death was from natural causes. Earlier he had said he believed it was caused by a heart attack.

Jester was swept into office by a big majority after a heated 1946 campaign in which his chief opponent was Dr. Homer P. Rainey, deposed University of Texas president.

Has Ideas at 7

Jester first expressed his idea of becoming Governor at the age of 7, when he asked his mother what a lieutenant governor was. His father, George J. Jester, had been elected to that office.

Told that the office was next to the Governor, young Jester replied:

"Well, I want to be the real Governor."

Jester, who described himself as a "liberal but not a loose Democrat," stepped into the Governor's office from his railroad commission office where he served since 1942.

He made only three contested political races, all successful. His first was for the railroad commission post to fill an unexpired two-year term. In 1944 he was re-elected without opposition, the first time in 20 years that a candidate for that important oil and gas regulatory office had run unopposed.

His second contested race began—this one for Governor—with a prayer from his then 85-year-old mother for Divine guidance. Discounted early in the race as a strong contender, he overcame odds and ran a tough race ahead of 12 opponents, four of whom withdrew. He was reelected last summer.

He is survived by his wife, three children and a grandchild. Mrs. Jester was the former Mabel Buchanan of Texarkana, a kinswoman of President James Buchanan.

Baltimore Couple Held After Row-House Fire Nearly Suffocates Daughter, Kills 4 Others

Baltimore, July 11 (AP).—A couple whose infant child was almost suffocated in an apartment house fire fatal to four other persons were arrested late today.

The couple, Francis A. Cavey, 32, and Mrs. Margaret Cavey, 26, were docketed as held for investigation and then placed in cells at the Northern Police Station.

Police did not disclose their reasons for taking the Caveys into custody.

The fire swept through the old apartment house early today. Firemen said it apparently started in 56, who had come from Charlottesthe Cavey apartment.

The dead were: Mrs. Early Pugh, ville, Va., to visit her daughter; John Harvey Pugh, 7-year-old grandson who had some here with Mrs. Pugh; Joan Kennedy, 15, and Peggy Kennedy, 10, whose mother Mrs. Pugh was visiting.

Mrs. Florence Kennedy, 38-year-old mother of Joan and Peggy, was burned critically. Another daughter, Myrna, 14, was also hospitalized with burns.

They lived in the third-floor apartment.

The Caveys, who lived on the first floor, were awakened shortly after 2 a. m. by smoke. Cavey ran to a nearby corner to give the alarm, then returned to the house. He and his wife were led from the building by firemen.

Several minutes later, Cavey realized that in the confusion no one had brought his daughter, Frances Sharon, 5 months old, from her crib.

Battalion Chief Paul W. Reynolds made three trips into the fiercely blazing apartment before he could find the infant. She was treated for effects of smoke inhalation.

The apartment house is located at Guilford ave. and 20th st., just around the corner from another row-house fire which burned eight buildings and killed a 22-year-old woman deaf mute yesterday.

Her stepfather, Charles White, 45, was taken into custody, then released after questioning.

He told police the fire started after a beer party. They quoted him that Miss Kirtley was smoking in bed and set fire to the mattress. White said he dragged the mattress to the kitchen, poured water over it and left it there, thinking the fire had been extinguished.

Firemen said one of the doors was partially blocked by furniture.

The medical examiner's office reported it had found no evidence of foul play.

Miller Pledges Better Schools In Virginia

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Farmville, Va., July 11.—Francis Pickens Miller swung through the southside Virginia farm belt today with a proposal to remedy the "ineffective and evasive action" of the "Byrd machine" toward schools.

In his bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the August 2 primary, Miller said he would guarantee improved schools and a $2000 minimum salary to teachers without the "intolerable nuisance" of a sales tax or "a sop flung at parents and teachers."

The avowed antiorganization candidate in the four-man Democratic contest, Miller in a radio address cited the school issue as "next to the main issue of the campaign." This he calls "whether we shall have a free society in Virginia."

Makes Three Proposals

To meet the "desperate shortage of school funds while preserving local government and local responsibility," he proposes:

1. To ask for sufficient State funds to pay all teachers' salaries up to the $2000 minimum, with a $100-a-year increase for 12 years.

2. To allow localities to supplement the minimum "if they see fit."

3. To use local instructional funds thereby released to finance long-range building programs as a "symbol of local responsibility."

The money should become available to the State, Miller said, with "strict enforcement of existing tax laws and with thrift and prudence in administration," without additional taxation.

Battle Resents Miller Statements on Gov. Byrd

Richmond, Va., July 11 (AP).—In a statement tonight, Senator John S. Battle, said:

"It is no wonder that he (Miller) is grossly disturbed when he contemplates the support of me by the overwhelming majority of the 140 members of the General Assembly who the people of Virginia have elected to represent them in that body."

'Absentee Government' Seen If Miller Elected

Richmond, Va., July 11 (AP).—Governor Tuck said today that if Francis Pickens Miller is elected Governor "we will truly have absentee government in Virginia."

In sarcastic tones the Governor made his first comment for publication on the four-way race for the Democratic nomination as his successor in office. Specifically, the Governor's words were in answer to Miller's charges that Senator Harry F. Byrd is an "absentee landlord" running Virginia's government.

Two Laborers Held in Shooting At N. Brentwood

Two laborers were charged with assault with intent to kill yesterday as a result of a shooting Saturday night at 41st st. and Wallace rd., North Brentwood, Md.

Oliver Wendall Gordon, 29, of 4518 Banner st., North Brentwood, who was nicked six times, ran a block to his home after the shooting, police said. John Oliver Freeland, 23, of 4021 Webster st., North Brentwood, admitted shooting Gordon, according to Prince Georges County Detective Richard A. Pearson, but claimed Gordon also had a gun.

Gordon denied this and said he had borrowed a pistol earlier, but had returned it because it wouldn't shoot. Freeland was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon. The men were released on $5000 bond each pending a hearing Thursday in Hyattsville Police Court.

Pennsy to Recall Many Workers Laid Off June 13

Philadelphia, July 11 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad announced today it is recalling several thousand of the 15,000 employes furloughed June 13. The back-to-work order is for July 18.

A spokesman said the rehiring move "is to meet service demands" and is system wide.

The exact number, however, will not be known immediately, he added, because the recall is being handled on a division basis.

At Altoona, Pa., manager Clair I. Clugh of the Altoona Works said about 2000 of 5000 furlough shop employes will be called back, bringing the force there to about 8000.

An increased demand for locomotives and cars was given by Clugh as the reason for the Altoona employe recall.

Edgewater, Md., July 11 (AP).—Swimming too soon after a heavy meal was blamed by police today for the drowning of Jack W. Crawford, 23, of 5516 Call place, se., Washington, D. C.

Anti-Church War Scored

Chichester, England, July 11 (AP).—The World Council of Churches today set up a committee to draft protests against interference with religious liberty.

The complaint will attack anti-church pressure in the Soviet satellite states, a spokesman said.

The central commiittee of the world council, which came into being at Amsterdam last summer as representative of 150 Protestant and orthodox groups in 44 nations, is conferring on church problems. The church-state struggle in east Europe tops the agenda.

The drafting committee is headed by the Bishop of Chichester, Dr. George Kennedy Bell.

Restaurant Chain Submits Top Bid For the Stables

The Howard Johnson, Inc., restaurant chain, yesterday submitted the highest bid for the swank Stables Restaurant for use as a commissary structure.

That company submitted the bid to the Public Buildings Administration for a five-year lease on the place at Riverside dr. and E st. nw. The bid was for rent of $650 a month. Three other bidders offered amounts ranging from $500 to $575 a month.

The Stables, formerly operated by Mrs. Jean Moran, was padlocked in April by the District government for nonpayment of taxes. Subsequently, furnishings and equipment were sold at auction. The Federal government acquired the property several years ago as a prospective building site. Final decision on the bids submitted yesterday will be made in about 10 days.

O'Konski Sees Red Conflict

As the nation was divided into two camps—slavery and freedom—in 1864, so the world is now divided between democracy and communism, Representative Alvin E. O'Konski, R., Wisc.) said last night.

He spoke at Fort Stevens, battleground nearest Washington during the Civil War, where President Lincoln watched the Union soldiers repulse a Confederate attack on the Capital.

The occasion was the seventeenth annual exercises commemorative of that battle, under sponsorship of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic; and the eighty-fifth anniversary of the Union-Confederate clash.

The nation could not remain half free and half slave, in 1861 O'Konski added, and the result was four years of conflict.

Eventually the forces of communism and democracy must clash, the speaker said. "God have mercy on the people of the world, particularly the people of the United States, if the democracies lose this conflict.

We can't do business with the Communists; they will never come to any agreement with us." It is a Communistic maxim, he declared, that if three fourths of the world population is killed in a struggle for supremacy of communism, it is worth the effort.

Prices Come Down, Hemlines Go Up in Fashions for Fall

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 11.—Prices are going down and skirts are going up. That's the gist of the fall fashion picture, as viewed here today in the first few opening shows of the New York Dress Institute's Thirteenth Annual Press Week.

MISS PRESTON

Eleanor Lambert, spokesman for the couture group which makes up the institute, gave fashion editors this heartening news:

"Clothes are going to be cheaper. Practically every ranking designer has concentrated on making more and better clothes in the lowest end of his particular line."

In the language of the consumer this means that there will be more good clothes in the lower price brackets than there have been in several years. High price garments still abound, of course, but not in the numbers they did in the immediate postwar years.

While the Institute offers no statistics on the subject, the consensus appears to be that prices, in general, are about 10 per cent lower.

But just to prove what a contrary world fashion can be, Christian Dior, the rugged individualist, has started his line $10 higher than last year.

THE FASHION conscious women, however, does not look to Dior for price standards. His forte is that of style setter, and today it is apparent that the man who put the skirts down three years ago is putting them up again. One glance at his collection and you come out feeling like an "old look" in a too long skirt. M. Dior is playing havoc with milady's hemline, and, if he has his way, the knee cap is going to come into its own once more within a year or so.

Not that he believes you should wear short skirts if they are not becoming to you. His representative, Dorothy Smith, gave us this message from the spectacular Frenchman who is now in Paris preparing his August collection:

"Fix your hemline to suit your taste and figure. That is good fashion."

Few women, however, care to be so sensible. In all probability we will copy his new hemline, as we did his last.

Dior offers us, in this second American collection, which will reach the stores around September 1, startling evening dresses with uneven hemlines that are liable to end anywhere. Sheath-like underskirts reach a few inches below the knee and are covered with flying panels which are above ankle length in back or at the sides.

There are full skirted gowns, sweeping to the ankle in back, rising high in front; pencil slim skirts, slit to the knee, cleverly draped with panels.

These short evening gowns, reminiscent of the 1920's, were the most dramatic features of his showing. But there were many more trend-setting items.

Keep in mind, for instance, the effectiveness of a huge fur muff to go with a cloth coat this winter; velvet blouses with tweed suits; huge pockets; slimmer skirts, with fullness concentrated in the back; shorter jackets; little head-hugging hats, slapped tight over one ear; jet jewelry; and necklines that are always uneven and always interesting.

M. Dior introduced one more typically French touch into the institute's regular procedure. He asked that no photographs or sketches be published of costumes in his collection until after September 1. Neither he nor his clients want a repeat performance of last winter, when his famous "swallow" dress was copied by cheaper houses before the original was well-launched.

There's a Trick in Ironing Spun Rayon

Did you know that there is a special technique for ironing linen-textured spun rayon dresses? All these medium weight spun rayons should be pressed with a hot iron when they are bone dry. If the fabric is damp, it won't press well and the whole job takes longer. You'll be pleased to see how easily and smoothly these linen-textured spun rayons iron when they are completely dry. For best results, iron on the wrong side of the fabric, using a clean, well-padded ironing board.

Casual Clothes Emphasize Bandannas, Natural Lines

New York, July 11 (AP).—Claire McCardell, high priestess of the casual look, presents bandanna necklines for fall.

Apparently charmed by a cowboy, Claire puts bandanna collars on everything from coats to dinner dresses, fastens them in back or front as her fancy dictates, makes them big or little, low or high. Chief distinguishing characteristic is their careless look, as if they had been tied on as an afterthought.

Miss McCardell continues her plunging necklines in the fall collection, sometimes showing them slit to the waist, sometimes filled in with a silk neckerchief as a guard against pneumonia.

Notable in her fall showing are a flock of brand new fabrics, designed by Claire herself and including such things as tapestry knits, soft rayon-and-woll jerseys, nubby tweeds, crip-quilted woolens, two-tone rib knits, all-over smocking on wool jersey, woll irish lace and silk pique.

Joset Walker's fall fashion tricks include one-sleeved stoles, wool turtle necked shirts and side-saddle skirts in the kind of sturdy wools and gay colors that delight the college crowd. Typical of her collection is an outfit consisting of chamois flannel vest, red flannel skirt and brown jersey turtle-neck shirt.

Brigance, doing his first collection for the house of Charles Nudelman, accents what he calls the "curvilinear silhouette", which seems to mean smooth, natural shoulders and hiplines in well-bred skirt-and-shirt outfits for all hours of the day and night. The skirts all have pockets.

Visiting U. S.

Mme. Minister Of Cuba Aids Child Welfare

In Washington it's Mrs. Mesta and in Havana it's Senorita Sabas. Minister without portfolio in the Cuban Cabinet, Senorita Mariblanca Sabas-Aloma is the second woman of Latin America to hold a Cabinet position. The first Cabinet woman was also Cuban and she was also Minister without portfolio.

"Without portfolio," Senorita Sabas explained, "means a Minister who does not head a department, but who may be called upon to tackle a problem in any department."

Mme. Minister is on tour to establish cultural ties between Cuba and the States. She arrived here Saturday, is leaving today for a three weeks' stay in New York City, and possibly Canada.

Women Diplomats

In a press interview yesterday at the Cuban Embassy, Minister Sabas said she would like to see greater participation of women in certain aspects of government, principally in the fields of diplomacy.

Feminine diplomats already include Dr. Margarita Quintana, who serves as charge d'affaires in China, and Senorita Consuelo Batista, attache at the embassy here, who served as interpreter for Senorita Sabas yesterday.

She was most interested, the Minister said, to know what American women think of the possibilities of a third world war, and also what they consider the best way to check communistic infiltration in schools.

A former columnist in the Avance newspaper of Havana, Senorita Sabas said she is happy to be in a position now where she can bring about reforms which she used to agitate for in writing. She wrote a great deal about the need for life-saving equipment on the beaches of Cuba, and now she can see that such equipment is actually installed.

"A woman's heart," she said, "is not entirely a sentimental thing. It can also be used for deeper understanding in civic problems."

Political Prisoner

Senorita Sabas has participated in many revolutions in Cuba, and she has been a political prisoner on five occasions. In 1935 she was exiled in Miami, Fla., for eight months. President Prio and other members of the present government were also exiled at that time.

The Minister without portfolio states she is a self-made diplomat. She attended the University of Havana, and also studied at the University of Puerto Rico.

The best way to fight communism, she believes, is to implement in practice the weapon of democracy. In Cuba, she added, the party now in power stands for real democracy. American women, she said, are an inspiration to Cuban women in their fight for equal rights.

Summer Entertaining

Oklahomans' Quips Plus Cafritzes' Steaks and Juleps Made It a Gay Week-End

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

WHY A Washington summer weekend should be stigmatized as "dead" is an unexplicable myth. With Congress in session, only the supersturdy can emerge Monday without a touch of creeping paralysis or the burgeoning of exotic nervous symptoms.

This particular past Friday-to-Monday, after wallowing in Perle Mesta's swear-in, we settled down Saturday to real business, at a tiny, quiet little affair, the Oklahoma State Society breakfast. Oklahomans, and a scattering of foreigners from Texas, California, Georgia, Arkansas, to a 450 paying-guest total, briskly lipped through java, a spot of powdered eggs before settling down to a flow of pretty funny oratory. Quipping, without interruption, they burbled happily until 12:20 p. m.

Snappiest ad-libbers were toastmaster "Red" Mosier, vice president of the American Airlines, and Oklahoma's 6-foot-4-inch junior Senator Bob Kerr, though sedately seasoned senior Senator Elmer Thomas came up with a giddy nifty. Cautioned by the toastmaster to be brief, the Senator started off—"Well, as Anthony said to Cleopatra when he returned home at 3 a. m., 'I didn't come here to talk!'"

Senator Kerr who, when in the groove, effortlessly spills Will Rogerisms, aimed most his good-humored barbs against Texan Attorney General Tom Clark. Kidding about Texans moving to Oklahoma and vice-versa, ran high.

"I understand," said the Senator, "the war was won by Texas in the outlying States—well, that's impossible since you can't outlie Texas!".

Steak and Mint Juleps

THE CREME DE LA CREME of the morning gathering had scarcely caught breath when, joined by another hundred notables, they were confronted with the entrancing opportunity of slaking thirst in unreckoned mint juleps, rassling with an individual steak.

All this happened in the coolth atop Foxhall Road, on the tapis vert of the Morris Cafritz palazzo, where 175 T-bone steaks, cradled in peas and asparagus tips, and preceded by 175 crabmeat portions served in individual china crabshells, were washed down with libations of Bourbon and mint.

A full moon sailed overhead and in mellow mood the Capital's wariest lions sat down with the Capital's most frustrated lambs. In slick white jackets, Messrs. Pearson, Krock and Childs left typewriters far, far behind; Senators Taft, Pepper, Malone, Kefauver made merry with, obviously, never a thought for the encroaching morn. The Vice President sang, the Biffle chorused. The cameras clicked a staccato obliggato.

New Georgetown?

NOW WHILE real estate is static, if not on the queasy side, a number of smarties are snapping up old, saggy houses in a section, which, they believe, may some day rival Georgetown. The Bert Andrews' newly redone house is on New Jersey Avenue between 3d and 4th sts. and right near, on D st., interior decorator Pierre Dutel, has acquired property and is transforming it with the wizardry which has got him the lushest job from the Hollywood Gold Coast to deep in the very rich heart of Texas.

Dutel, who's doing-up a Tropical style apartment right on Park Avenue for one of the Hanna tribe, also has three houses on the Texas string. He hasn't decided whether to stop over in between trips in Washington or sell his shack once it's finished. But anyone with a few spare oddments of folding money, might make a nice return, acquiring a bit of property in his immediate neighborhood.

Baby Knows How You Feel About Foods

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

A PARENT'S feelings are accurately communicated to the baby, even if she feels she is covering up ably. In that three-times-a-day ceremony of feeding, she has ample opportunity to experiment and recognize how quickly her child will react to her own emotions.

Many a mother puts food before her child as if, having cooked and served it, her part has been done. But it is the way in which she proffers it to the child that makes it seem interesting and appealing, or something to be pushed aside because Mommy evidently has no use for it.

This is just an addition to the well-known fact that if Daddy doesn't like rice pudding it is pretty futile to try to get his son interested in it. It is the observation of individuals concerned with children that a mother's frowns, her obvious anger, her disinterest in the ceremony, ruin the child's appetite for what he is eating. He may not know how to describe his mother's emotions, but he is perfectly aware that she has them and that he is influenced adversely by them.

There are too many children who do not thrive despite good diets. They are peevish and irritable. They push away food and thus give the mothers a real cause for being upset.

Other mothers use the feeding time as an opportunity to get in a few surreptitious squeezes while the baby nurses or takes the bottle. She gives the baby his food with an air of, "Here, darling, is something you are going to love," instead of, "There, stop your crying, this will hold you for a while." And don't tell me the baby doesn't know the difference!

It is only when the mother has given the baby an opportunity to eat the best food and has served it to him with the smile she would reserve for royalty, that she can, with perfect aplomb, see him accept or refuse it. She knows, then, that it is because he isn't hungry, or doesn't feel well, and not because her own emotions have flavored it unpleasantly.

But, if she has fed him with an air of: "Oh, what a bother you are and how glad I'll be when you are old enough to feed yourself," she may have real cause to worry. Then she has given the child nourishment with an accompanying flavor that makes it literally impossible for him to swallow.

SUSIE Q.

"I'm dissatisfied already . . . I want double my money back right now!"

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

Have you ever been to a telephone company "open house"? Last week, while I was visiting my nephew Tom and his family, the local telephone central office held an "open house" and we all decided to go.

A nice young woman took a group of us through the central office and I enjoyed it thoroughly. I can't say I understood all the complicated equipment we saw, but I did understand the part about telephone party lines.

One of the telephone men explained that in spite of the great progress being made in expanding the telephone system, some folks are still waiting for telephone service. He said that by connecting two or more families to the same line—a party line—several families get service instead of just one. So, actually, party-line sharing helps bring telephone service to more people sooner.

'Prenatal Care' Booklet Calms Childbirth Fear

By Ruth Davis Silcox

CHILDBIRTH without worry or fear is a definite possibility for the Nation's mothers if they will read the booklet "Prenatal Care," published by the Children's Bureau, Federal Security Agency.

The first edition of "Prenatal Care," published in 1913 by the bureau has the distinction of being their oldest publication for parents, and more than nine million copies have been distributed. This year's booklet is a completely revised edition.

Because today 85 per cent of all live births are attended by physicians in hospitals and another 10 per cent attended by physicians outside of hospitals, this revised edition of "Prenatal Care" places the emphasis on maternity care supervised by a physician.

In the earlier publications, when few mothers were delivered by physicians and fewer in hospitals, the booklet was largely confined to personal hygiene of the mothers, preventing complications and preparing for confinement—usually a home delivery.

Much is being written these days about child birth without fear. Without question the reading of this booklet by pregnant mothers — particularly those in their first pregnancy—will do much to eliminate fear and uncertainty in the mother's mind. During this really tremendous experience there is a tendency for young mothers to feel their symptoms are peculiar only to themselves. Because of this feeling, symptoms which are really routine cause worry and fear. The booklet lists and explains common symptoms so the mother will be able to understand them and then they will not worry her.

In the booklet, the course of pregnancy and delivery is clearly charted and the sign posts for which one should watch are unmistakably identified. Starting with early signs of pregnancy, through complete discussion of how the baby grows until delivery and the delivery—it is all there.

Development Pictured

An extremely interesting inclusion are descriptions and medical drawings showing the development of the baby, starting with the first week of life. So rapid is the development each week for the first two months that for this period the development is given week by week. After that, the stages of development are discussed by months.

Completely exploded is the old time idea that a mother's prenatal thoughts, frights or actions could "mark" the baby. Babies cannot be marked, it is explained, because "there is no direct connection between your nerves or your blood stream and the baby's." That one statement should do much to remove a common worry of pregnancy, that "my baby won't be all right."

The chapter on "Thoughts and Feelings" discusses in detail fears and doubts common to pregnancy. "Am I going to get along all right? Will my labor be painful? How can I manage to do everything? And nearly every pregnant woman at one time or another feels that she looks 'funny;' her clothes aren't right, her balance is awkward, she can't stoop over to tie her shoes, she's tired of the same old dress." Some young mothers would discuss these fears and worries with their mothers or an experienced sister for reassurance.

But for many, there is no one with an understanding ear with whom to discuss their innermost feelings during pregnancy. For these, this one chapter will be a wonderful help. The reasons a pregnant mother is more susceptible to worries, doubts and fears at this time are explained and suggestions are made as to how these feelings may be overcome.

Equally important are the discussions on the father's preparation for his fatherhood and the preparation of older brothers and sisters for the arrival of the baby. Mothers will particularly like the admonition that on the mornings they may not feel up to par, "let your husband get the breakfast!"

There is a most practical discussion of how to keep well, including the food necessary in pregnancy and the reasons why you should eat the foods recommended. "We should make it clear that the importance lies more in eating enough of the kinds of food she needs than in eating a lot of just any food. Don't let anyone tell you that you must eat a lot more because you are eating for two. The amount of food a pregnant woman needs is only slightly more than the food a normal, nonpregnant woman requires."

Facts and Reasons

Attractive, comfortable clothes for pregnancy are not as hard to find today as when the first edition was released. However, the section on clothing is most important because it tells the reasons for wearing garments such as low-heeled, comfortable shoes and avoiding tight garters and belts.

The lists of essential clothes to have ready for the baby and the items to pack in advance of the trip to the hospital for yourself and baby are included.

The complete discussion—in lay terms—of what happens during labor and delivery should give a pregnant woman the confidence which comes only with knowing exactly what to expect. Concluding the book is a chapter on the care of the newborn baby—the goal of pregnancy.

In her first pregnancy a mother is introduced to a completely new body of knowledge and vocabulary. The glossary at the back of the booklet defines in simple language the medical terms peculiar to pregnancy which the doctor will use so that the patient can also use them.

The birth of her baby should be a shining hour for a mother. With the adequate mental and physical preparation outlined in this booklet, it can be just that!

Single copies of "Prenatal Care" are available to parents and professional workers without charge from the Children's Bureau, Federal Security Agency, Washington 25, D. C. Copies may also be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., at 15 cents each with the usual 25 per cent discount on 100 or more copies.

THE FAMILY SCRAPBOOK

BY DR. ERNEST G. OSBORNE

Getting Acquainted With One's Parents

There seems to be an almost universal interest on the part of children in their parents' backgrounds. What fun it is for them to look over snapshots taken long before they were born! And if there are love letters in the attic or old report cards, they, too, are poured over avidly.

Our children were much impressed with a bookshelf I had hewed out of a fallen tree at the spot in the mountains where we spent our honeymoon. Even such little things seem to mean much to youngsters.

Many an adult has told me that as they grow older, they realized how much they had missed knowing something of their parents' childhood and youth. It's an important part of a child's life, this participation in his parents' background.

Part of the stuff of the stories we tell young children can well come from our own family experiences and the things that happened to us as we were growing up. Older youngsters, too, will appreciate hearing something of the things we went through.

Naturally, one will not overdo this background business. It could become boring. But there is a real place for it in the family.

Keep in Trim

Weight Loss Depends on Cut in Diet

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN milady finally decides that she must do something about her weight, her thoughts turn to diet, but only momentarily. Then she reasons that with all the modern miracles, surely there must be some way out besides diet. So she looks into the reducing methods so dear to the feminine heart — cabinet baths, massage, vibrators, rollers and machines that stimulate the circulation, the well-known fountain of youth.

All of these de luxe methods are fine, and streamlining—provided the daily calories are trimmed just under your personal requirements. Reducing begins and ends with what you eat. But there are a couple of advantages in paying to reduce. Having taken this step to streamline, you immediately feel pounds lighter. Then having out good cash, you're determined to get your money's worth . . . and that's what it takes to reduce, determination.

Burning the Calories

Cabinet baths, steam baths and the like are devices invented to stimulate sweating, drive the water out of the tissues and send the scales down. This they do, but the loss is in water, not actual fat. "Honest sweat" in which you personally put on the steam is different, because the muscular effort burns the calories.

However, if the pleasure in seeing the scales down after a steam bath encourages you to eat lightly, fine—you'll lose. But if a 2-pound loss in water from the tissues lulls you into overeating at dinner . . . you're right back where you started.

What about the mechanical devices—rollers, squeezers and machines that stimulate cirulation? They are all to the good; and with calories cut below requirements you'll lose weight and, happily, in the right places. But mark this—on a full diet, with calories right up to the hilt, you can lose weight, with or without these mechanical aids.

Massage Is Good

As for body massage, it's wonderful, too. Massage is soothing, gently prods the circulation into action, removes kinks and induces a feeling of well-being generally. But unabetted by diet, massage is no reducer either.

It all boils down to food intake versus energy output. Clip the calories where they will be least missed, keep circulation up and doing with muscular exercise or mechanical stimulation, and soon friends will be asking for your reducing system.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Elderly Woman Recalls Self-Made Rich Man Generally Admired for Candor About Humble Past; Yet Her Golden Memories Get Snubbed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: One of the richest men I ever knew—and one of the nicest—used to talk freely of his boyhood years, when he was "chambermaid" to a herd of milk cows. And people always admired him for making no secret of his humble past.

Yet those of us who were born with the traditional silver spoon, and join the school of hard knocks in later life, aren't supposed to bring up the past, it seems.

In contrast to the self-made man, I have another friend who had even more wealth in her youth than my family had, and who spent it more recklessly, if that were possible. And she and I learned long ago to carefully edit our reminiscences, leaving out references to coachmen, governesses, waitresses and the like, so as not to annoy the listener.

However, at times we forget to be cautious and speak involuntarily, in fond recollection of those fine far-off days when servants' work was left to servants, and we neither knew nor cared whether dish towels ought to be ironed or who might furnish a good recipe—and when conversation ranged from books to plays to world affairs and back agan.

She Has Descended Ladder of Fortune

ONCE WHEN my friend was recounting an early experience, someone cut in with, "What fairy tales have you been reading lately?" And once when the talk was of Christmas checks, I mentioned that a cousin of my father's considered money to be no real gift at all. She would give a fat check on occasion, but it was always accompanied by her "real" gift—either books, or silver, jewelry, china or what-not. As I was speaking, someone quipped, "Oh yes, indeed; and how have you been?"

Please don't visualize me as sitting in solitary state, looking down my nose at the proletariat. I've been "proletariat-ing" myself at a great rate for several years, yet the only people with whom I have common interests are my children's families and their friends. They love me and I love them, but as a grandame I can't keep their pace, so I have no social life.

Incidentally, I'm not having delusions of past grandeurs. It's a matter of record that my paternal ancestors were affiliated by friendship or kinship with all the families listed in New York society's original "four hundred" (actually less); and my mother's family, though not so social, was equally affluent. What is your reaction to all this? S. C.

Democratic Society Isn't All-Generous

DEAR S. C.: The harsh truth is that in a democratic society, so-called, the general struggle is to "reach the top," and the majority of those who fail to "make the grade" are captiously envious of the few who win—while those who reach the upper level are apt to be pretty expedient in approving or "rejecting" each other.

Thus I venture to think that the self-made rich man was admired (at the time you recall) not so much for his candor about his humble past, as for the power and influence of wealth he had acquired, and the dynamic aspects of character which had brought him from obscurity to eminence.

Also, of course, most self-made rich men have exceptional vitality, else they couldn't have conquered great odds; and as Louis Bromfield recently divulged with dry humor, when badgered by a bevy of ladies to define masculine "it"—vitality seems to be the basic ingredient; and perhaps the man you recall had a lot of this essence of charm, wherewith to season his reminiscences.

Wise to Practise Art of Listening

AS FOR the rude treatment your nostalgic vignettes receive, bear in mind: 1. You are an elderly woman in lean circumstances now, with none of the psychological or material advantages held by the self-made rich man in his prime. 2. The envious element in the frustrated masses, who tend to listen respectfully when "money talks," even if secretly backbiting the speaker, tend also to be spitefully tough with an erstwhile darling of fortune who parachutes into their midst.

For advice: dismiss the past, accept the new, be brief and forward looking in speech; learn to listen with repose, not bidding for the spotlight in conversation—and you'll be thought wise, young in heart, and pleasant company for anybody. M. H.

About Junior, Senior Name Etiquette

My husband was named for his father, and therefore is a "junior." However his father died several years ago. Should he now drop the junior? If so, my mother-in-law and I would have the same name. Should she sign her name as "Mrs. Ralph T. Smith" or "Mrs. Catherine Langston Smith?" F. F. F.

It is improper for a man to continue adding junior to his name after the death of his senior. Your husband is therefore correctly Ralph T. Smith. Since your name must correspond with his, yours is Mrs. Ralph T. Smith, without junior. Your mother-in-law, if she lives in another town, can continue using Mrs. Ralph T. Smith, too. However, many widows with "junior" sons add "senior" to their names for clarity's sake and this is perfectly correct. It isn't correct for a widow to go by a combination of her maiden name and last name, such as Mrs. Catherine Langston Smith. However, she would correctly sign letters Catherine Langston Smith, putting Mrs. Ralph T. Smith, senior, in parenthesis underneath if she wishes.

Regarding a recent letter in your column from a bride who wished to preserve a piece of her wedding cake, I would like to tell you how I have kept mine, a dark fruit cake, for 25 years. My husband soaked the cake very thoroughly with brandy, then wrapped it in a sterilized towel soaked with brandy. Around this he put several layers of newspaper, tied it up snugly, and put it away in a box. We didn't open that package for 25 years! Six weeks before the anniversary, we took the cake out and started the brandy-soaking process all over again. The cake tasted perfectly delicious, even after all those years. A Reader.

What is the correct attire for a formal afternoon tea? What is the difference between a formal and informal tea? A. R.

An informal tea is usually a "come-and-stay" tea, where a few guests are invited for a specific hour, sit around and drink tea, eat light refreshments and chat together an hour or so. A formal tea is one where a large number of people are invited to call between certain hours (4 and 6 p. m., for instance) and tea is served continuously from an attractively appointed table in the dining room. A street-length afternoon dress and a flower hat would be appropriate garb for the latter affair, although almost any pretty, light summer dress and hat would be suitable at this time of year.

I have seen insulated cardboard boxes—lightweight and convenient size—which permit a salad lunch to be stored in an oven-like locker. Do you know if they are available for purchase in Washington? E. A. R.

I wonder if you are thinking of the disposable vacuum cartons which will keep food either hot or cold for several hours? These are available here at a large 5 and 10 cent store on G street (telephone Sterling 3900) and at a shop on Connecticut avenue (telephone Ordway 6608). The idea for this thermo-type, cardboard container was born during World War II and perfected by a Navy captain. It is completely liquid-tight, will hold either a 1-quart food container, two pint cartons, or three half-pints within the large, round outside carton. It is inexpensive and can be tossed away after the meal.

As I am going to be married in September, I would like to know if I would be able to wear a white suit and navy blue accessories? Also what color hose should I wear? B. E. T.

Light suits are often worn by brides in informal weddings, so your white one would be perfectly appropriate and in keeping with bridal tradition, too. Since people start wearing fall clothes in September — sometimes before — it would be nice to have the suit made of sheer wool or something of the sort, rather than a strictly summer suit. The navy blue accessories should be appropriate, as navy is used more in the fall and winter now than ever before. As for hose, a medium beige should go nicely both with the white suit and navy blue shoes. You might wait until a little closer to the time of the wedding and check the fall hosiery shades. Too dark a color would not be pretty, in my opinion.

Roastin' Ears of Corn Are at Best About Now

JULY is the time to pile the platter high with steaming roasting ears of corn, fresh-husked from the garden, and served so hot the butter skids and melts over every kernel.

Corn should be cooked fresh to get all of its sugar sweetness. Corn on the cob takes 6 to 12 minutes in boiling, salted water to prepare. Here is how to cook it in a pressure saucepan, according to Better Homes and Gardens magazine:

Place the corn on the rack and add one half cup of water. Salt. Cook three minutes at 15 pounds of pressure. Then reduce the pressure immediately.

If you're going on a picnic and want to keep the corn hot, cook it this way: Bring the pressure to 15 pounds. Remove the pan from the heat. Let the pressure drop gradually. Leave the cooker closed until time to serve.

Corn oysters are a delicious way to prepare corn for a late Sunday breakfast. The corn should be grated, not cut, from the cob. Use a coarse grater and grate into a shallow pan. Here is the recipe:

Two cups of grated corn, two beaten eggs, ¾ of a cup of enriched flour, ¾ teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of pepper and one teaspoon of baking powder.

After grating the corn, add eggs, flour sifted with salt, pepper and baking powder. Drop the mixture from a tablespoon into 1 inch of melted fat or salad oil, hot enough to brown bread cubes in 40 seconds. Fry the patties until they are golden brown and the edges are crisp. Turn once. Serve with hot maple syrup.

This recipe makes 12 corn oysters.

Succotash is another fine way to serve corn. To make it, you need two cups of fresh corn, cooked and drained; two cups of cooked and drained, fresh lima beans; three tablespoons of butter or fortified margarine, salt and pepper and ½ cup of light cream or top milk.

Combine the vegetables in a double boiler. Add butter, seasonings and cream. Heat thoroughly. This recipe serves six.

Puerto Rican Governor's Wife to Be Feted

MRS. LUIS MUNOZ-MARIN, wife of the Governor of Puerto Rico, will be guest of honor at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Wednesday to be given at the Carlton Hotel by the Puerto Rican-American Women's League.

Seasoning Utensils

New cast-iron cooking utensils, even though they have been treated at the factory, usually need to be "seasoned" before using. This helps prevent rusting, especially in humid climates, and increases the utensil's utility. Scour first with household cleanser; wash, rinse, and dry thoroughly. With a pastry brush, spread unsalted fat (vegetable oil or melted shortening) on the inside of utensil and cover. Place in warm oven (250 to 300 degrees) or on top of stove over low heat for several hours. Occasionally swab utensil with paper towel, and cover with more fat. Repeat the seasoning process, after which utensil will be ready for use.

One on the Aisle—

London's Heart Belongs to Gussie

By Richard L. Coe

THE YANKS IN LONDON: Soldiers, sailors and the ordinary American tourist still squat at the feet of Eros in Picadilly Circus, are, in fact, all over town. . . . The signs that plaster Picadilly are lighted now, though, and the names and shows have a U. S. A. flavor. . . . Harpo and Chico Marx have taken up Danny Kaye's spot at the Palladium. Harpo's press agent wants to get him in a picture with Gorgeous Gussie, but Gussie's busy and hardly needs the boost; the Londoners loved Gorgeous Gussie.

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER drops into the Savoy Grill after her one-woman show at the St. James's, where the British are interested in her "Wives of Henry VIII," but prefer her still wonderful Philadelphia matron who's teaching her son arithmetic. . . . Cornelia's here with her husband, Alden S. Blodgett, and their carrot-thatched, 18-year-old son. . . . After her two weeks at Gilbert Miller's headquarters in King Street, the Blodgetts will be off to the Continent to show their lad some of the spots Cornelia and Emily Kimbrough wrote of in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay. . . . Cornelia's books share shelves here with James Thurber and Damon Runyon, Yank humorists the British love.

PAUL MUNI hurrying from Charing Cross into the Phoenix, where he'll open in "Death of a Salesman" in a few weeks, with Katharine Alexander playing the Mildred Dunnock role. . . . Already there's plenty of advance speculation about the Arthur Miller drama and Sir Laurence Olivier's production of Tennessee Williams' "A Streetcar Named Desire." . . . The latter will be along in October and the big question in London critical circles is which will be the favorite, Williams, whose "The Glass Menagerie" with Helen Hayes did not get popular approval, or Miller, whose "All My Sons" was much admired?

EDWARD DMYTRYK, in from the studio at Denham, where he's directing "Christ in Concrete" with Sam Wanamaker in the lead . . . Dmytryk's ability, personality and general know-how have made him immensely respected by the British film people, who at first had to be shown about this American director whose relations with the Un-American Activities Committee have made it impossible for him to direct in Hollywood . . . The English are as wary of the Commies as the rest of us and Dmytryk answers for me the question I've longed to put to him ever since he wouldn't respond for the trio on the Hill . . . I put the familiar question to him myself and he replied: "Of course I'm not a Comunist, but I think the committee had no right to ask me that question." . . . I remark that I'm sorry he didn't tell the Washington press at the time of the hearings what he'd just told me and Eddie says, "Yes, I suppose I should have made that perfectly clear, but frankly, Dick, I'd certainly have nothing to gain in life by being a Communist."

MARY ELLIS, who's been in London so long people think of this Gotham brunette as English, at John Gielgud's comfortable house near Weswinster Abbey after the theater . . . Mary, who was the first of all the "Rose Maries," has just closed a long run in Terry Rattigan's "Playbill," two one-act plays which will be done in America next winter by Maurice Evans . . . Mary looks beautiful, vibrant and asked what she feels when she hears the "Rose Marie" score, replies that it seems to her that those songs must have been sung by someone else . . . So much has happened since.

TWO OTHER YANKS at John's Georgetown-like house on Cowley Street: John Battles and Jimmy Jamison . . . Battles, who was in "Allegro," stars in a new musical with Adele Dixon, "Belinda Fair," after a spate of straight acting in Dublin . . . Jamison directed the dances for London's "Brigadoon," in which he appeared in America . . . "Brigadoon" is a big hit at His Majesty's and Jimmy will be with it when this Yank version of Scotland plays Edinburgh and Glasgow around Christmas.

MADELEINE CARROLL streaking through Londontown on her way to Paris where, I've a notion, both a divorce and a marriage will keep her busy.

MRS. MARTIN BECK, owner of New York's fine theater on 45th st., sharing a table at the Savoy Grill with Henry Sherek, co-producer of Mrs. Beck's hit of last winter, "Edward, My Son." . . . Could be Henry may be talking business . . . "Champagne for Delilah"?

"THE WINDOW," as it did here, slipped into town without much known about it; now it's the best-liked of recent American movies.

THE EASY WAY: Anne Baxter claims she's gotten rid of 12 pounds in a dozen days just keeping active on the beach. She's prepping for a Technicolor musical with Dan Dailey at 20th Century, "You're My Everything."

Miss Winwood Gives Us Her LadyBracknell

LAST night was my first visit to the new, charming open-air theater at the foot of Meridian Hill Park. The week's bill stars Estelle Winwood and John Buckmaster in Wilde's great farce, "The Importance of Being Earnest."

First, a word about the theater and its setting. Here is one of the lovliest settings I've ever seen. Since the opening play, I'm told, the seats have been placed on a raked series of steps, affording what seems to be good visability for all. I roamed about and found that were I a millionaire paying for my seats, I'd surely choose the cheaper ones. They give you the trees and vistas that make this the old world spot it is.

With the fountains in the large pool behind the stage colorfully lighted and playing, one thinks immediately of the parks of Paris or a delightful amusement park in the heart of Copenhagen, Tivoli.

The stage itself seems quite suitable for one-set plays and the open-air informality suggests that broad farce and whammy comedy may be the forte of the spot. As it is, the demands of Wilde's highly artificial style are incongruous here. Even the softest breezes do not become the hothouse world of that most scintillating of word-carvers.

On Spoken Song

More important, however, Miss Winwood's company is not at home in Wilde's world. True, the vital mike positions make the players gingery of their moves, but they still are not up to speaking Wilde's lines for their comic worth, or even anything approaching their comic worth.

For each line of "The Importance of Being Earnest" is an icy gem pointing directly to another. Some lines went without laughs last night because the audience simply does not quickly catch their brilliance, but for the most part, this was the fault of the players.

The reason for this is general inability to speak with any range. A player would take one tone for a speech and attempt a laugh simply by accenting a word. This is not the way to get laughs from Wilde. His lines must be sung: there must be the greatest variety and artificiality in each speech. Each actor must be able to run a gamut of tones in one breath. This takes a training we in America usually lack.

Buckmaster Scores

John Buckmaster, as Worthing, pulled it off as the speeches should be spoken and as a result his was the most rewarding performance of the evening.

Miss Winwood rather surprised me by a desultory approach to Lady Bracknell, one of the greatest comedy roles in the theater. She has played it with great success in the past and though she got her laughs last night, a more careful performance would have given her many more.

Stanley Bell, as Algy, did well enough, improving as he found his ease, but with the exception of Woodrow Parfrey's Canon Chasuble, the balance of the cast simply recited what should have been spoken song.

Still, Meridian Hill is a happy spot of exceptional charm. If you are not acquainted with Wilde's masterly comedy, you couldn't ask for a lovelier spot to meet "Earnest." Perhaps by tonight Buckmaster's style and Miss Winwood's unerring comedy will have found their most efficient open-air range.

Tuck Asks D.C. About Service In Bus Seizure

The District Commissioners yesterday were asked to signify if they wished the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington bus line to continue to serve Washington in the event the strike-threatened line is taken over by the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Under Virginia law, the State is empowered to seize control of and operate the line if the strike called for July 21 materializes.

Telegram From Tuck

The commissioners' views on the subject were sought yesterday in a telegram from Gov. William M. Tuck addressed to John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners.

Young wired back that the board would consider the question at a regular meeting today.

In the meantime, Alexandria City Council yesterday voted approval of State seizure in the event of a strike. The action was taken upon request of Tuck for an opinion.

Cooperation Offered

Fred Dominy, president of local 1131 of the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, the union involved in the strike threat, said Tuck had been notified that the employes would be glad to cooperate with the State and operate the buses on the regular schedule.

Another meeting of union officials with company negotiotions and a Federal mediator is slated for today Dominy said.

Man Escapes Death in Fall Of 4 Stories

A window washer who grabbed at ivy vines and a tree in his descent escaped alive in a four-story fall yesterday. Observers said he missed a brick wall by inches, and landed, standing up, on a lawn.

The victim was James Fowlkes, 20, of 2312 G st. nw., employed by the Vivian Hotel, 1723 G st. nw. Police said he was attempting to open a window of a fourth-floor room. The window stuck, suddenly opened, and Fowlkes plunged out.

The hotel is covered with ivy, which Fowlkes clutched, then grasped at a tree. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a possible fractured hip and vertebrae. His condition was reported as not serious.

100 Chicken Cooks Vying at Salisbury For National Title

Salisbury, Md., July 11 (AP).—The fat will be in the fire here Tuesday when about a hundred cooks will try their fanciest chicken recipes on a panel of judges.

At stake is a title: "Champion chickencook of the Nation."

The contest is the opening event of the three-day Delmarva chicken festival here in the heart of th 100 million dollar broiler industry on the Delaware-Maryland-Virginia Peninsula.

There will be friend chicken, baked chicken and chicken fricassee. Curiously enough, not a single contestant has signified an intention of turning out the batter-dipped, quick-cooked product known as Maryland fried chicken.

Alexandria us Driver Cleared in Fatal Accident

Alexandria bus driver Charles Turesco, 30, yesterday was cleared of a reckless driving charge placed against him June 29 after a fatal accident on Mt. Vernon blvd.

Turesko was driver of an Alexandria, Barcroff & Washington Transit Co. bus which collided with a car between Washington National Airport and the 14th Street Bridge. George A. Baumann, 16, of 9 W. Uhler ave., Alexandria, died of injuries suffered in the crash.

Testimony at a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Stanley King in Alexandria yesterday showed that Baumann's car skidded on the wet pavement directly into the path of the bus which was proceeding at a legal speed.

Democrats Pick Hogan For N. Y. Mayor Race

New York, July 11 (AP).—District Attorney Frank S. Hogan was named as the Democratic nominee for mayor of New York City today, but whether his nomination would stand without a primary fight was not certain.

Hogan was nominated by three of the city's five Democratic leaders and accepted the bid.

But Mayor William O'Dwyer said failure of all five to agree on a candidate might mean a fight for the nomination in a Democratic primary in September. O'Dwyer left in doubt the question whether he would run for mayor again.

Road Block Yields 2 Wanted for Murder

Williamsport, Pa., July 11 (AP).—Two men, picked up at a police road block after a gasoline station robbery, were ordered removed today to South Carolina to face Federal charges of kidnaping and murder.

They are Shelton Gainey, 19, of Myrtle Beach, S. C., and Lester R. Gantt, 26 of Castonia, N. C. The Federal Bureau of Investigation charged them with kidnaping Robert D. Oliver, 27, a taxicab driver, at Myrtle Beach, S. C., firing three bullets into his head and dumping him near Bluefield, W. Va.

Pilot Escapes As Blind Landing Wrecks Plane

A Marine Corps pilot escaped serious injury though his plane was almost completely demolished in a crash landing at Andrews Air Base yesterday afternoon.

Public Information Office at the base said Lieut. Col. Donald Yost of Quantico, Va., was practicing blind landings in a single-seat Corsair fighter plane, on the Air Force range at Andrews Field.

He landed about 250 yards short of the runway, the information office said. He was able to walk away from the wrecked ship, but was taken to the Station Hospital at the base for treatment of cuts and bruises and for observation.

Maj. Harry C. Cooper, also of Quantico, was flying as Col. Yost's wingman on the landing, but came in successfully, officers said.

Half Year TV Output Put at 1,500,000 Sets

Chicago, July 11 (AP).—A sales manager today predicted the television industry "may well produce and sell" 1,500,000 TV receivers during the last six months of the year.

The speaker was Allan B. Mills, general sales manager of the RCA Victor home instrument department. He prepared his speech for the National Appliance and Radio Dealers Association.

Indians Stoned in Durban

Durban, Natal, July 11 (AP).—Native mobs stoned four Indian buses and a police van in Durban last night. Police immediately cordoned off the area, where 100 were killed in race rioting last January. The situation was quiet today.

City Fishing Permits Ended In Greenbelt

Residents of Greenbelt, who hitherto have paid 25 cents for city permits to fish in Greenbelt lake, may do so in the future for free, the City Council voted last night.

But they still must have State fishing licenses. A group of residents recently were warned sharply by State game wardens who found the anglers with city permits but no State licenses.

The council also directed City Manager Charles C. McDonald to survey all streets and sidewalks in the community and notify "owners" to repair them at once. This is in the nature of a major ultimatum.

Owner of the entire community is Uncle Sam.

At its meeting the council also:

Directed McDonald to investigate possibility of a boat concession on the lake.

Gave notice of the annual election which will take place Tuesday, September 20, from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. Nominating petitions signed by at least 55 citizens must be filed between July 22 and August 20.

Received notice from the Public Housing Administration that Greenbelt now has a total population of 7062. These are divided 3817 persons 21 years old and upward; 1655 from 6 to 20 years inclusive, and 1590 5 years and younger.

Harris Indicted For Murder in Rape Slaying

Charlottesville, Va., July 11 (AP).—John Harris, 30-year-old Nelson County Negro, was indicted for murder today in the June 30 rape-slaying of Easter May Bledsoe, 29-year-old white woman of Avon. An Albemarle County Circuit Court grand jury returned the indictment.

The woman's partially clothed body was found about noon July 1 near a secondary road, a short distance from the Albemarle-Nelson County line. Waynesboro police arrested Harris the next day.

Harris has "on several occasions" admitted the slaying, though he has denied raping the woman, Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife said Saturday.

Examination of the body showed Miss Bledsoe died of three stab wounds in the neck and that she had been raped, according to Dr. E. D. Davis, jr., Albemarle County coroner.

The cooks, old, young and including a dozen men, will work out on a battery of electric ranges in the National Guard Armory, starting at 1 p. m.

Annapolis Picks Rowe For Mayor, 1320-1262

Annapolis, Md., July 11 (AP).—Attorney Roscoe C. Rowe was elected Mayor of Annapolis today on the basis of complete unofficial returns. Rowe, Republican candidate, polled an unofficial 1320 votes to 1262 for Democratic William U. McCready.

Rowe, retired Navy lieutenant-commander and former State's Attorney of Anne Arundel County, picked up a 191-margin over McCready in the predominantly Negro Fourth Ward to win.

McCready, who sought a third term, carried the other three wards by narrow margins.

Duff Signs Extradition For Alleged Slayer

Harrisburg, Pa., July 11 (AP).—Gov. James H. Duff signed papers today asking for the extradition from Lynchburg, Va., of Ollie Carey, 49, Negro, charged with slaying an Abington, Pa., policeman. The Governor's office said Carey is accused of the pistol death of Abington Patrolman Thomas J. Mathews.

At Lynchburg, Carey denied he shot and killed Mathews. However, State Police Sergt. C. E. Rives said Carey admitted orally to being in the truck which Mathews and another officer stopped while investigating a robbery in the rural section of Philadelphia the night of June 28.

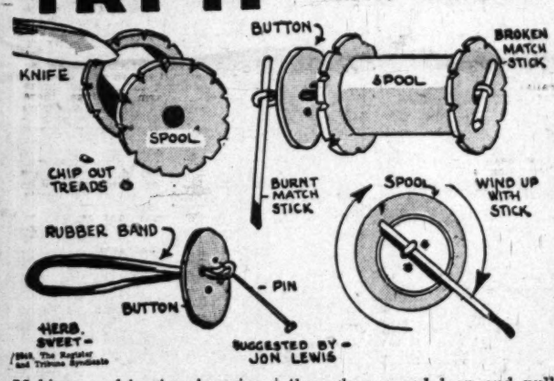
TRY IT
A SPOOL TRACTOR WITH TREADS



Making spool tractors is a simple project but brings a great deal of fun if you experiment with different sized spools and combinations of rubber bands.

Find as large a spool as possible and cut out tiny chips to make treads similar to those on a tire. These rough edges help to keep your spool tractor from slipping. Take a rubber band and poke it through the spool so that there is a loop on each end. Put a piece of match stick

The Lyons Den By Leonard Lyons

SCHENLEY'S offered Winston Churchill the highest price-per-broadcast in the history of radio for a series of 15-minute weekly commentaries on world events. Mr. Churchill turned it down . . . Ralph Bunche soon will be asked to take over the Arab-Israeli negotiations at the Lausanne Conference, where the United States, French and Turkish mediators have been unable to reach a solution . . . The Council at Valluris, the French village where Rita Hayworth and Aly Khan were married by a Communist Mayor, needed 48 hours to decide what to do with the one-million-franc gift from the bridegroom. They decided to spend it on a public rest station.

MAYOR O'DWYER'S Yes-and-No wavering about running again prompted Gabriel Wechsler, secretary of the Fusion Party to say: "There's one thing about O'Dwyer: You never have to be in doubt about him until he makes up his mind" . . . Beatrice Straight, the actress, is recuperating from an attack of mumps during her honeymoon at her Westbury, L. I., estate . . . Hal Wallis offered Ezio Pinza $25,000 to record the Anderson-Weill "September" song for use in the new Wallis movie being filmed in Italy. Pinza had to reject the offer because of his new MGM contract . . . Ed Gardner's "Duffy's Tavern" will be sponsored by a distillery this fall.

JUSTICE WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS completed an 80-mile hike over the Lebanon Mountains. He's covered Israel, Syria and Iran . . . He stopped at Beirut last week to make the commencement address at the American University. And in referring to his own alma mater, Douglas spoke of Whitman College at Walla Walla, Wash. His 3000 listeners roared when he said "Walla Walla" and roared again when he repeated the name of the city. Then he learned that in Arabic, "Walla Walla" means "By God, By God" . . . He wrote to an American friend: "Just found out I was graduated from Whitman College, By God, By God."

Bill Gold is on his vacation and will resume "The District Line" July 18.

THE BRITISH edition of the United Nations World needed £1500 to publish its first issue. John Miller, the magazine's executive editor, had only £40 in the till. The editors were worried, as the first deadline approached—and then Miller arrived with the money they needed. He won it at the race track, betting on the long shot, "Commissar" . . . Margaret Sullavan will make recordings of the Mary Poppins stories . . . Oscar Levant paid a $16 bill at the Stork Club, then asked his companion: "Should I leave a $3 tip, or a $4 tip?" His friend suggested $3 was enough "No. If I leave $3, the waiter will sneer at me. If I leave $4, I'll be able to sneer at the waiter. That's all tipping really means."

NOW that "Inside U. S. A." is closing its tour, Jack Haley's agent, Paul Small, is getting him a $10,000-a-week booking at the Roxy next month . . . A radio technician at the Vatican expects to have ready, by next Christmas, a device which will prevent any jamming of its short-wave broadcasts.

What's the Verdict?

SLIPPERY LETTUCE

Q. A husband was sent by his wife to buy groceries. He was pushing a cart between racks of fresh vegetables when he slipped on a lettuce leaf and fell, suffering injuries to his hip and to his pride. He sued the store. His evidence showed that he was a bona fide customer, that he slipped on some lettuce, and that he was injured. At the conclusion of the presentation of this evidence, the store asked that the suit be dismissed. Should this be done?

A. Stores are not "insurors" of their customers. They are not liable for everything and anything that happens to customers on their premises. Like other persons and institutions, stores are liable when injury is caused by their negligence. Under the facts of the above case, there has been no showing of negligence. There is nothing to show that the store (rather than a customer) dropped the offending lettuce, or that its employes knew that it lay on the floor and had time to remove it. Since there is no showing of negligence by the store, the suit would be dismissed . . . F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

A-Bomb Casualty Fear Lessens

By Drew Pearson

While the Atomic Energy Commission is informing Congress of streamlined methods for bigger and better atom bombs, Army doctors have been working quietly to prevent loss of life from those same bombs — and with surprising success.

Col. De Coursey

It can now be stated that, as a result of this research, Army doctors have lost part of their fear of the bomb's casualties, and that at least 20 per cent of the lives lost at Hiroshima could now be saved.

This is the conclusion of Col. Elbert de Coursey, commandant of the Army's Medical Research School, whose principal assignment has been to prepare medical defenses against the atomic bomb.

He explains that 65 to 85 per cent of the victims at Hirosima and Nagasaki died of burns and injuries, easily treated by medical science. The challenge to the medical profession, therefore, is to abandon the present method of treating each patient as an individual, and work out a system of mass treatment. Even the assembly-line technique, Dr. De Coursey suggests, may have to be applied to medicine.

The doctors have also made progress in treating atomic radiation, which attacks the blood cells and causes hemorrhages. Tests on the animals at Bikini showed that atomic hemorrhages can be stopped by a common dye, known as Toluidin blue dye. Thereafter, the problem is to have enough blood plasma on hand to administer mass transfusions.

As further proof that the atomic bomb isn't as devastating as it has been built up to be, Dr. De Coursey claims that a person might even survive when directly underneath an atomic explosion—provided he were protected by a few feet of earth or concrete.

Furthermore it is believed that a person could come out alive from a simple, 6-inch concrete shelter, located even within the 2-mile radius previously considered fatal.

In both cases the shelters would protect those inside from the deadly gamma rays. But whether the shelters themselves could withstand the terrific concussion, Dr. De Coursey points out, would depend upon how much was absorbed and deflected by the surrounding buildings.

Dr. De Coursey admits that the super atomic bomb, developed since Bikini, would increase the casualties but not change the medical problem. The bigger the bomb, the more the patients, but their treatment remains the same.

Another Cabinet Illness

The Truman Administration may have the unfortunate experience of another very sick Cabinet member, unless friends of Secretary of the Interior "Cap" Krug take him in hand.

Krug's fainting spell while testifying before the House Public Lands Committee last month was not an isolated case, but the third time this has happened publicly.

While making a speech in Los Angles, Krug was forced to stop, retire from the rostrum, and could not resume. Again, at Phoenix, Ariz., while speaking on a national radio network, Krug was only two minutes through his address when he started to keel over and had to hand his speech over to someone else to read.

After his recent illness before the House Public Lands Committee, Krug rested for half an hour, went back in the committee room and made a heroic effort to resume his testimony. He was unable to do so.

A hulking figure of a man, and only 42, Krug looks the picture of health, but developed an athlete's heart while a football player at Wisconsin. This is now aggravated by high blood pressure and a weight of 270 pounds which he has not been able to reduce.

It has also not been helped by long and grueling hours in Government service. Krug had an outstanding record with the Tennessee Valley Authority, performed a skillful and difficult job as chairman of the War Production Board, also served in the Navy.

As Secretary of the Interior, Krug did a good job of battling John L. Lewis, but since then poor health has forced him to be one of the least active members of the cabinet. After his Los Angeles fainting spell, he was wise enough to take three months off. But another two months was necessary after the Phoenix incident. Since then, Krug is less frequently in his office than any other cabinet officer. Yet either pride or devotion to duty forces him to keep up the pretense of official activity.

The tragedy in the Forrestal case was that friends encouraged him to remain in office when many knew he was desperately tired and on the verge of nervous exhaustion. Friends of "Cap" Krug would do well to see that he does not make the same mistake.

New U. S. Citizens

Attorney General Tom Clark's campaign to educate naturalized Americans on the duties of citizenship is getting vigorous support from New York's radio station WHOM. Generoso Pope, who owns the station, came to this country from Italy with no parents, found his first job at the age of 8, but has now risen to become one of New York's most potent leaders. So he feels that he knows something about the advantages of United States citizenship and he wants others of New York's vast foreign-born community to feel the same.

Run by his son, Fortune Pope, WHOM broadcasts in foreign languages 17 hours a day—longer than any other station in the U. S. A. During the Italian elections last year, WHOM arranged shortwave broadcasts from New York Italians to their relatives abroad, with the result that thousands sent democracy messages orally to the folks in the old country. It had an important effect on turning the election for democracy.

Congressional Teamwork

The closed-door meeting of Senate and House conferees on the public housing bill was a model of how Congress should, and can, act when it wants to. A total of 102 differences in Senate and House versions of the bill were ironed out in jig time.
